Reagan in Iceland for meeting with Soviet President Reagan, Nancy embrace for farewell kiss

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
The Associated Press

REYKJAVIK, Iceland — President Reagan, vowing to "face the tough issues directly," but frowning on quick-fix deals, arrived in Iceland Thursday night for his weekend superpower summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Under a polling rain, Air Force One taxied on the tarmac on the Keflavik airport. The president, wearing a light tan raincoat, was greeted by Iceland's president, Vigdís Finnbogadóttir, along with Prime Minister Steingrímur Hermannsson and Foreign Minister Matthías A. Mathíassen.

An honor guard of Icelandic policemen stood by as Reagan shook hands, then took a limousine ride into Reykjavik, the capital city.

Several hundred Icelanders, a few holding candles in the darkness, stood along the motorcade route in the rain to catch a glimpse of Reagan's armored limousine as it sped by.

About 25 people from the neighborhood where the president will be staying, waited in a chilly drizzle at a roadblock at the entrance to the "Red" district, where the American ambassador's residence is located.

When Reagan's limousine turned down the street, television lights momentarily illuminated the president's face, and there were squeals of delight and cheers from the crowd.

Snare Gudmundsson, a 24-year-old meatpacking plant employee, said, "This is a big moment for everybody to have President Reagan here in our country."

Sigrún Grímsdóttir, who runs a small hotel, said, "Gorbachev is doing great things and Reagan is, too, just by having this meeting."

Given a warm farewell on the White House South Lawn by his wife Nancy, members of the Cabinet and staff aides on Thursday morning, Reagan said the talks "can be a step, a useful step... And if we persevere, the goal of a better, safer world will someday be ours and all the world's."

In an indirect reference to his failure to win a congressional consensus for dropping a package of restrictions on his arms policies, Reagan said he needed the nation's unified support.

But the president left with the Congress still at loggerheads over his demand that it give him unqualified support to negotiate with Gorbachev — not his own government — on the future of the "Star Wars" future missile defense shield, nuclear tests, chemical weapons and strategic arms limitations.

"The world has never known a force as strong or decent as that of America when we are united," Reagan said.

Given a choice by Gorbachev, who proposed the new round of talks just three weeks ago, Reagan picked the remote island nation on the Arctic Circle in keeping with his desire for a low-key, businesslike session without the media circus that attended his first meeting with a Soviet leader last November in Geneva.

And both sides agreed the talks would be accompanied by a news blackout.

In fact, Mrs. Reagan chose to stay home, keeping commitments she had for an array of appearances associated with her work in educating people about the dangers of drug abuse.

Although Reagan portrayed the meeting in Reykjavik as a private talk between two men, the Soviets were expected to send about 300 in their official party, and the U.S. contingent was likely to be about the same size. More than a thousand reporters, photographers, technicians and support people were ready to cover the hastily arranged summit.

President may visit Twin Falls

By STEPHEN HARTGEN
Times-News managing editor

TWIN FALLS — President Ronald Reagan may visit Twin Falls on behalf of Idaho Republican candidates on Oct. 31 as part of a Western presidential swing immediately before the Nov. 4 election, officials have told The Times-News.

James Goller, chief of staff for Sen. James McClure's Boise office, confirmed Thursday that a presidential visit to the Magic Valley was in the planning stage.

The White House could not confirm Reagan's visit, saying only that it was a possibility.

The likely spot is the gymnasium at the College of Southern Idaho, which seats 3,700, but no time has been set.

Goller emphasized that the visit was not definite, and that it hinged on both the outcome of Reagan's

Senate orders Nevada judge off bench after historic vote

By LARRY MARGASAK
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate on Thursday convicted U.S. District Judge Harry E. Claiborne of "high crimes and misdemeanors," making him the fifth federal official in history removed from office through impeachment.

Claiborne, a convicted tax evader and federal prisoner, was thrown off the bench at 2:14 p.m. EDT, following a four-hour trial in the Senate.

The chief U.S. district judge for Nevada was found "guilty" on three of four impeachment charges by the necessary two-thirds majority. He was acquitted on a fourth article, although a majority of senators voted "guilty."

Claiborne, 69, was found guilty on Articles I and II, accusing him of the same willful tax violations that caused a federal court jury to find him guilty in 1984.

Article III, of which he was acquitted, said the judge's criminal conviction alone warranted his removal from office.

Article IV, which he was convicted on, charged that he had betrayed the judiciary and the nation.

The votes were: Article I, 87-10; Article II, 90-7; Article III, 46-17; and Article IV, 85-8. Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, voted "present" on all four counts. However, on count

HARRY E. CLAIBORNE

III, 34 senators joined him in "present" votes.

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., said many senators were "in a hurry" to vote on Article IV because they believed a "guilty" vote would establish the precedent that a criminal conviction was equivalent to being guilty on impeachment.

A conviction on any article would have been sufficient to oust Claiborne from his lifetime job. Until now, he has earned his $78,700 salary while in prison.

Each senator stood in the historic proceeding to cast his vote of "guilty" or "not guilty." Claiborne sat at a table in the Senate well, watching his two lawyers keep their silence.

Most senators were somber as they responded to President Pro Tempore Strom Thurmond's question, "How say you? Is the respondent guilty or not guilty?"

"Guilty, Mr. President," responded Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., the first to respond on impeachment.

There was absolute silence in the blue-robed chamber, making unnecessary Thurmond's warning to spectators in the gallery that "there will be no expressions of approval or disapproval."

Just before the result of Article I was announced, Claiborne sat back in his chair and folded his arms across his chest. Later, he placed his glasses on the defense table. But he kept his composure, from his entrance into the chamber until his exit between Sergeant-at-Arms Ernest Garcia and a federal marshal.

Former Sen. Howard Cannon, D-Nev., a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said after the vote, "I feel the Senate did not give Judge Claiborne the trial he was entitled to."

Hasenfuss under duress, official says

By GEORGE GEDDA
The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A top State Department official maintained Thursday an American captured in Nicaragua was acting under duress when he implored the U.S. to help him escape to supply Contra rebels.

Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, in a telephone interview, said no one should believe anything said by the detained American, Eugene Hasenfuss, until Hasenfuss can speak freely, Abrams said.

Hasenfuss likely was subjected to threats and intimidation, Abrams said.

Abrams called The Associated Press hours after Hasenfuss told a nationally televised news conference in Managua that he had worked with CIA employees in his efforts to keep the Contras supplied with weapons and other equipment.

Before his cargo plane was shot down over southern Nicaragua on Sunday, Hasenfuss said he had taken part in 10 such flights from Honduras and El Salvador. He said 24 to 26 CIA personnel had taken part in the operation in El Salvador.

The State Department official repeated the Reagan administration's demand of CIA involvement as the FBI launched a preliminary inquiry to determine whether Americans operating privately are violating U.S. laws by flying weapons and other equipment to the rebels.

FBI spokesman Paul Miller said in Miami that two agents began the inquiry Wednesday about whether the Neutrality Act or any other U.S. statutes had been violated by the efforts to resupply Contra counterrevolutionaries resisting the leftist Sandinista government.

Meanwhile, retired Maj. Gen John

Downed plane stands at Southern Air Transport facility in Miami in mid-August

K. Singlaub, who heads an organization that has been active in the resistance and anti-communist rebel groups, said he was not involved in the group's efforts to resupply the Contras.

"I do not know who ordered CIA aircraft into the air. I want to assure you that I had nothing to do with me or any of my activities," he told a news conference.

He said his organization's support for the Contras consists of humanitarian aid and not weapons.

Abrams said the Sandinistas have denied U.S. officials consular access to Hasenfuss. In direct violation of the Vienna Convention.

Soviet research ship at sub sinking site

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has dispatched what appears to be a research vessel from its Northern Fleet to the Atlantic Ocean site where it lost one of its nuclear submarines earlier this week, Pentagon sources said Thursday.

The research vessel, believed to be operated by a civilian crew, should arrive in the area sometime late Friday or early Saturday, added the officials, who asked not to be named.

Additional air and water samples taken by the United States since the sub's sinking early Monday continue to show no trace of radiation or harm to the environment, the sources said.

The Navy's Ocean Group, which has been monitoring the area, said the sub's sinking was "a tragedy" and that the Navy was "doing everything possible" to locate the vessel.

Leroy, Andrus take different tacks on approach to recovery

By The Associated Press

Both candidates for Idaho governor on Thursday urged business to help government get Idaho's economy going again.

But Republican Lt. Gov. David Leroy and Democrat Cecil Andrus, former governor and Interior secretary, called for taking different approaches toward spurring the state's stagnant economy.

Both appeared in Coeur d'Alene before the convention of the Idaho business organization, the Idaho Association for Commerce and Industry.

Leroy urged support for President

Reagan's economic program. "Idaho's destiny lies in its willingness to commit itself and its resources to building opportunity instead of building government," he said.

Andrus said business leaders must join government in a partnership to solve the state's critical economic problems.

"The next governor is going to have to look to you as a partner. And I don't mean just in the sense of good pre-election rhetoric. I'm suggesting a real partner who provides solutions, involvement, manpower and ideas," said Andrus.

Leroy said Idaho should support

Reagan's efforts to shift resources and responsibilities from the federal government to states.

"Idaho and America are at a crossroads where we must decide to seize the opportunity to strengthen the private sector, as the scope and size of federal government is curtailed," he said.

Andrus said economic development and new jobs shouldn't be a partisan issue. For too long, he said, "we have had the notion in Idaho that we can operate only when we choose our sides. Well, I say those times are over, the time has arrived to start looking for more things to agree on rather than deadlocking over the few things that divide us."

Republican Sen. Steve Symms spoke to the industry group Wednesday, and his Democratic opponent, Gov. John Evans, spoke to the convention Thursday morning. Evans said he supports a balanced budget amendment in the Constitution.

"We have a similar provision in Idaho's Constitution, and it has served us well for nearly 100 years," he said.

He said the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget reduction effort is "an important first step" in reducing the federal deficit.

Republican congressional candidate Mel Richardson claimed his Democratic opponent, Rep. Richard Stallaings, is "waffling" of changing his mind, on major issues.

So Richardson said on Monday he will hold a "waffle breakfast" at Ada County GOP headquarters, and plans a similar event later in the day at Twin Falls.

Symms continued his "Victory Express" motorcade in northern Idaho, visiting the tiny Clark Fork High School.

He told students they have unprecedented opportunity, but they must take education seriously.

"If you take it (education) seriously, you will be able to tell government what it ought to do for society rather than having it tell you what to do," Symms said.

Symms also released a statement in Boise saying he expects a countervailing duty of between 25 and 30 percent will be imposed on Canadian softwood lumber imports next week.

Symms said the tariff may be necessary because Canada apparently does not understand this country's resolve to put an end to the subsidized Canadian imports which have cost thousands of jobs in the Pacific Northwest timber industry.

LDS head will attend inaugural rites at Ricks

REXBURG (AP) — Mormon Church President Ezra Taft Benson is scheduled to attend today's inauguration of Joe J. Christensen as president of the church-run Ricks College in eastern Idaho.

Officials expect several thousand people to converge on the Rexburg campus for the ceremonies. Two hundred delegates from 22 colleges and universities will formally participate.

"We are excited with the response we've had and are expecting in excess of 2,000 invited guests to attend," said inauguration Chairman Ken Howell.

Three former Ricks presidents have accepted invitations — Bruce Hafen, dean of Brigham Young University's J. Reuben Clark Law School; Bishop Henry B. Eyring, member of the presiding bishopric of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints; and John L. Clark.

McClure tries sidestep to grain ratification

WASHINGTON (AP) — Idaho's senior senator said he will try an end run around the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission for federal ratification of the two-year-old water-rights agreement between Idaho Power Co. and the state of Idaho.

Thursday's announcement by Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, followed several days of negotiations between McClure and Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce Committee. McClure chairs the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee. The senator said if approved by Congress, his proposal would prohibit the FERC from considering any further proceedings concerning the so-called Swan Falls settlement over control of water in Idaho's Snake River Basin.

State officials including Attorney General Jim Jones have complained that FERC has been dragging its feet in granting final approval of the plan, opening the door to outside challenges.

"FERC has had more than enough time to consider this settlement," McClure said. "Yet I understand FERC may not rule on this agreement for another year or two, and that leaves hundreds of Idaho farmers and irrigators in limbo."

He said his proposal, co-sponsored by Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, would be part of the National Appliance Energy Conservation Act scheduled for Senate action within the next few days.

Pocatello sign ordinance still under fire

POCATELLO (AP) — A proposed ordinance limiting the height and size of commercial signs in Pocatello could be a death blow to businesses barely hanging on now, merchants and sign company officials contend.

"This ordinance is an utter disregard of the economic impact business will suffer if we're forced to take down our signs just to make Pocatello look nice," said Jim Thilmont, owner of a local Burger King franchise. "What you're really asking me to do is forget the $100,000 investment I have in my signs."

Thilmont was one of nearly 30 merchants, Greater Pocatello Chamber of Commerce members and sign company representatives at a Wednesday night meeting before the city's Community Development Commission. It was called by the Pocatello City Council.

The meeting was one of several leading up to a Nov. 6 city council vote on whether to implement the sign law.

The ordinance would prohibit businesses displaying more than 300 square feet of signs, individual signs taller than 35 feet, animated signs and free-standing signs in the downtown area.

Other signs downtown would be governed by rules of the Historic Preservation Commission, which would have authority to classify signs as "historically authentic."

The law could result in many of the signs and billboards in Pocatello being removed in the next five to seven years. That would be the responsibility of merchants, CDC member Steve Long said.

The CDC has worked for two years on the ordinance, aimed at codifying existing city laws and beautifying Pocatello's commercial areas, CDC Chairwoman Bessie Katsilometes said. But many merchants contend it is too harsh in light of the city's hard economic times.

"The CDC is not charged with looking at the economies and the dollars involved," Mrs. Katsilometes said. "Our responsibility is for making long-range visions of how we want our city to look."

Jerry Steadman of Young-Electric Sign in Pocatello said the ordinance would hurt at least 16 major companies in Pocatello.

Michael MacGowen, president of Idaho Outdoor Advertising, said 70 percent of his company's 54 billboards in Pocatello would be affected by the ordinance.

Irate reaction to printing truth misdirected

WASHINGTON — The reader outrage over The Washington Post's publishing Bob Woodward's revelation last week that our government has been conducting a carefully planned program to give false information to the American people matched the anger of those in the past month who were offended at some ethnic and religious articles carried in this paper.

But in this new outpouring of anger, it is odd that the vehement reaction was to The Post's printing things that were true. There was not a shred of indignation that The Post, along with other news media, had unknowingly printed lies. It is also interesting to note that both the truth and the lies were provided by government officials.

What it boils down to is that the government was telling big fibs and The Post was telling big truths. So who gets castigated? It is a sorry state of affairs. Every day, government spokesmen put a "spin" on the facts to make the administration look good. I imagine that's been standard operating procedure since George Washington's administration. As for the government's slicing the truth a little thin, in day-to-day operations, that's what newsmen get paid for — they're not stenographers simply taking down what's told them. Their job is to ask questions, panning for nuggets of gold.

But when the government tells outright lies that are sometimes impossible to disprove, this requires a whole new look at government.

In contemporary times, all administrations have been guilty of lying. A Pentagon spokesman in the Kennedy-Johnson era said the government had a right to lie to defend itself. The president who made it a campaign issue that he would never lie to the American people had his press secretary mislead the press when he felt the occasion demanded it. The Nixon administration was laced with untruths foisted on the American people, and it paid the heaviest price for it. In this recent exercise in official government deceit, it was a case of amateur night: grown men acting like children, but playing with a dangerous toy, which is disinformation — a word, incidentally, coined by the Soviets that refers to the practice of slipping into the system negative stories for the purpose of confusing the enemy. (Moscow's speedy advice to the United States of its disabled nuclear sub off the East Coast may well have been an inspired effort to capitalize on Washington's embarrassment by showing how the Kremlin levels with the American people.)

Secretary of State George Shultz, no friend of the Russians, defends the employment of the carefully planned web of lies which is an effort, intentional or otherwise, to corrupt the press. He quotes Winston Churchill's World War II observation that in time of war, the truth is so precious it must be attended by a bodyguard of lies. Secretary Shultz thus compares a desert rat like Moammar Gadhafi with a monster like Adolf Hitler.

This is a situation impossible to defend, even for so honorable a man as George Shultz. It is curious that Secretary Shultz's defense did achieve one purpose he hardly intended: unequivocal confirmation of Bob Woodward's story, which the White House was ineptly denying. And where will all this leave government officials who do tell the truth?

There are only two criticisms I have of Bob Woodward's story. He was too hard on The Wall Street Journal, which carried the first "disinformation" article; after all, it was the victim, not the perpetrator.

And he should have raised the question of whether the disinformation gang had been testing the waters for some months prior to The Journal article and perhaps planted one or two fabricated stories in The Post.

It is desirable that we do not return in the wake of this unfortunate affair to the post-Watergate era, when the Woodward-Bernstein school of journalism spawned a new breed of correspondent who cruelly cross-examined, rather than skillfully interviewed, who considered government officials guilty until they proved themselves innocent. This unproductive syndrome had just about worn off in Washington, but here we are again.

The American people are best served when there exists a healthy arm's-length relationship between government and the news media.

I hope and pray for the sake of the American people that, in this uneasy balance between government and the news media, neither side ever wins a decisive victory.

Joseph Laitin is ombudsman of The Washington Post.

Fabric of everyday lying helps ripen government untruths

BOSTON — This is how the morning begins. In my role as angry consumer, I call Mr. Blank for the 12th time this month. His secretary, who recognizes my voice by now, tells me, "I'm sorry, Mr. Blank is in a meeting."

I know the secretary is lying: (1) She is not sorry and (2) Mr. Blank is not in a meeting. She knows that I know she is lying. I know that she knows that I know.

What do I say to her? "Liar, liar, pants on fire." No, I say to her, "When will he be out of the meeting?" She then lies, "(3) I'm not sure but (4) he'll be glad to call you back."

There we go. It's 9:15 and I have already logged in the first four lies of the day. Or maybe I'm not counting right. What about the ad on the morning show starring an auto salesman (5) tearfully giving away his car for a song? What about the billboard enroute to work promising (6) high living with low tax? Are we on a roll here? Ordinarily, I do not get worked up about routine daily lying. Ordinarily, I do not get worked up enough. Like most of us, I have become desensitized. Indeed, I am apt to blame myself if I am foolish enough to believe the sign that offers (7) one hour. Dry Cleaning, or the cream that promises (8) younger-looking skin.

It is only children, after all, who are allowed to be gullible. They are expected to switch to the cynical mode about the time they find out about (9) Santa Claus and (10) television toy commercials. Private lies still carry the gain of betrayal into adult life, but adults are expected not to take public lies personally.

What has brought me out of this normal adult stupor and into a state of high consciousness is not just Mr. Blank, to whom I would like to say blankly blank. Nor is it his bartered secretary, to whom I wish a new job. It is rather the Disinformation Brigade at the White House.

Ever since the report that the Reagan administration planted false stories in the media last August that (11) mad dog Gadhafi was on the rampage again, I have felt something stirring the old embers of outrage.

It is no surprise that this report carried the by-line of Bob Woodward. His newspaper lineage goes back to the last time the general public seemed to get upset at a government lie: Watergate.

But since then, many of us have grown terminally tolerant of "mis" and "dis" information.

Today, it appears that we are actually fond of government hype, as long as it is in a good cause. We demand less evidence before we buy. (12) An All-New Drug Crisis! than a New and improved detergent.

In diplomatic speak, we expect the government's tongue to be somewhat forked. When the President denied (13) that there was a connection between the release of Daniloff and Zakharev, he was treated like a beleaguered CEO reading a press release written by his lawyers: (14) "The radiation is well within acceptable limits." What else could he say? The truth?

The sociologists will tell you that government lying destroys the fabric of public trust. But as I sit here waiting for Mr. Blank, I harbor a reverse theory, that the fabric of everyday lying is the perfect environment for ripening the government lie.

Glazing over the endless parade of smaller lies, we build up a kind of immunity to the big ones. (15) The computer is down, (16) We'll send that out today. Our experiences with business lies are so searing that eventually we even relate to the government more like consumers than citizens.

They are the advertisers. We are the buyers who must beware. They are the salesmen. We are the ones sold a bill of goods. We are, as jazz musician Dave Frishberg puts it, "marooned in a blizzard of lies," and (17) the check is in the mail.

What we need, I suspect, is a daily dose of intolerance for falsehood. We need to get unused to being lied to. To call people on the little ones: (18) Dry Clean Only, (19) Seven Days to a Slimmer You! (20) "This may sting a little" — so they don't roll into the big black ones.

I, for one, am going to begin with Mr. Blank. Today. Just as soon as he gets out of his meeting.

Drug hysteria brings attack on messenger, not message

Employees are as irritating to employers as teenagers to parents. They will not obey. They pester and lie. They speak their own language. From time to time they will just not do anything useful at all.

Now, we hear, they have developed an even more annoying fault: They are drinking, sniffing, smoking and snorting. Punitive measures are called for. If the little snouts will not "less up," let's test their rebellious bodies for drugs and their rebellious minds for lies.

There he goes again. President Reagan's latest proposal to invade our privacy and dignity would be a joke, a historical blip on the political graph of this country's many previous "wars" on drugs and deception — but for the amount of money, technology and time that we cannot afford to waste on ineffective programs.

To begin with, let's separate the smoke from the smoke screen. Drug abuse in this country is a problem that affects workers, teen-agers, housewives, athletes, actors.

perspective. How many people died from overdoses of cocaine last year? Several hundred. That is several hundred too many of course, as the poignant headlines of famous deaths remind us. But how many people died from legal drugs, cigarettes and alcohol, or from legal handguns? Hundreds and hundreds of thousands. President Reagan would advise people to "just say no" to buying a gun or having a smoke, and he has not yet decided to bully Scotland into abandoning the manufacture of Scotch.

The current hysteria about illegal drugs, though grounded in a legitimate concern, distracts us from the real problems that this country faces and allows us to attack the messenger instead of the message. It is like criticizing violence in sports while ignoring the system — players, owners and fans — that permits and encourages it. If we really wanted to improve employee morale and motivation, reduce drug abuse and enhance the quality of family life, we could be doing a lot more than would cost a lot less.

To reduce drug abuse on the job

(assuming that it exists in the dire proportions that we hear about), we could improve the working conditions of people's lives. It is not fashionable to talk of working conditions anymore — it smacks of unions and the subversive notion that perhaps people are affected by their circumstances. But consider this important longitudinal study conducted by Marvin Kohn and Carmi

Schooler, sociologists for the National Institute of Mental Health who interviewed a random sample of 3,000 American workers over a 10-year period. In their book "Work and Personality," they report that aspects of work — such as fringe benefits, complexity of daily tasks, pace, pressure and how routine or varied the work was — significantly changed the workers' self-esteem, job commitment and motivation.

"Job affects man," the researchers concluded, "more than man affects job." The degree of work flexibility was especially important. People who have a chance to set their own hours, make decisions, alternate tasks and solve problems are likely to rise to the challenge. They tend to become more flexible and tolerant in their thinking — and feel better about themselves and their work — than if they are stuck in a routine, boring job that gives them no control over what they do. As a result, their work motivation rises. "Working conditions," incidentally, apply to the work done by homemakers and students, too. Boring, routine, rigid work creates depressed and rebellious workers, no matter what the job.

We could also join the rest of the civilized world and spend some money for a sane national day of care. (Day care was funded by the government during World War II. It was not until the men came home that it was pronounced a communist plot.) That step alone would reduce the amount of Valium and anti-depressants that working mothers take.

Finally, we could devote some money for a sane national day of care. (Day care was funded by the government during World War II. It was not until the men came home that it was pronounced a communist plot.) That step alone would reduce the amount of Valium and anti-depressants that working mothers take.

Projected Gooding County tax increases a major concern

I, being one who is circulating petitions in the southernmost regions of Gooding County, have come to realize that several reasons for signatures being applied to the petitions than to "just" close the hospital.

Referring to the figures released by the Gooding County Medical Hospital Board, dated Sept. 18, 1986, to the county commissioners, we find an alarming increase in the losses sustained by the hospital, than what had been reported to the public.

In May 1986, Gooding County residents approved a hospital taxing district to support and maintain this county facility, regardless of its loss of a few thousand dollars. Unfortunately, these figures have continued to rise, and seemingly do not show any reason for accountability or expertise in the operation of this facility.

Many residents are asking about the losses. "Why are they so high?" "Why have they continued to go on?" and "When will they stop?" Residents of this county want answers to these questions.

A petition drive by concerned residents is the most viable way to become involved in an issue as serious as this one. They want to be heard on this issue because of the alarm increase in the operating losses of GCMH than what was previously reported.

In visiting with many residents and property owners, they have assured me that they are concerned with health care in Gooding County, and its cost to the taxpayer. Most residents assume that these losses are due to the indigent care responsibility of the county. I read on the front page of the Gooding County Leader (Oct. 1, 1986) that our county indigent fund will be $247,596 for 1987.

I have not seen any reports or figures, nor talked to any person who could incorporate these figures present or past into the GCMH losses to show reduction of losses or prove that there have been services rendered through this facility for indigents of the county, thus saving the taxpayer money.

I hope that if there is a cross-correlation of these figures, they will soon make their appearance. Combine the indigent care fund and the losses of GCMH, and the figures become exorbitant.

Due to these significant losses of this facility, its growing inability to compete with other regional medical facilities, and to attract needed doctors to offer the services needed to maintain a "self-supporting" institution, there is serious doubt and support is being withdrawn at this time by county residents.

Reading the newspaper of Magic Valley, we can observe the number of patients that are transferred to other regional medical facilities of southern Idaho, when critical health care is required due to injury or life-threatening ailments.

Are we maintaining a fully accredited hospital with vital health services or are we maintaining a hospital with heavy monthly losses which serves as a first aid station only to send its patients on to other regional facilities which offer the care and services needed by those individuals?

Can we afford this facility in its present financial condition? I don't feel we can afford this facility regardless of its monthly operating losses.

Our hospital board and county commissioners do not seem to be able to resolve this problem. The only solution seems to be to dump the whole mess and turn it over to the hospital taxing board to pick up the losses. The board's only purpose seems to be to levy taxes on property to cover the hospital's losses.

The taxing district cannot collect funds to support this facility's $20,000-a-month loss until January 1989.

How much longer can this facility maintain its respectability in the county under these circumstances?

The increase of property taxes upon our homes, farms, and businesses are going to prove to be a great liability for many of us.

major concern for all our county officials to ponder at this time.

Population density shows we are lacking in numbers to maintain this facility. Magic Valley Regional Medical Center wants to reorganize its services to spread its influence and services to all areas of Magic Valley. Can we compete with that? Where are the doctors located for most medical services? The answer is obvious. Transportation and communications are excellent in our areas and are being utilized at this time.

Health care is available for all who desire it. If we do not close GCMH let's at least consider reducing its operational losses to its ability to service the non-critical health care needs of our immediate area at this time.

I wonder when our governmental authorities will cease this spend and tax routine. I wonder if I'll be able to meet my property tax obligations when they come due — will you?

Letters/Various issues in Idaho election campaign bring comments

Here's simple explanation

I attended the debate between the Freedom to Work and the Idahoans Against Deception representatives sponsored by the League of Women Voters, Monday, Oct. 6, at the College of Southern Idaho, in an effort to understand what all the fuss is about.

In a nutshell, it seems to be "the right of anyone to work in a union shop and enjoy the benefits earned by the union without being required to pay union dues." This is called "freedom."

People also have freedom to work in a non-union shop if they can get the jobs.

If the two contestants had honestly worked together with Pete Cenarrusa, he could have placed clarification language on the ballot which would have read: "A yes vote will keep the right-to-work in union shops without paying dues. A no vote will repeal the right-to-work law."

Both sides claim dire results if they lose. I can't see that the "freedom workers" have anything to lose. They are the offensive team players, the challengers in this playoff.

In my family, we were firmly taught the story of the Little Red Hen by my mother.

In my husband's family, which was an outdoors, hunting and fishing family, they were firmly taught that "everyone helps with the camp work" by the father.

Perhaps this simple explanation can help you make up your mind how to vote. If you didn't grow up on the homespun philosophy of Aesop's Fables and classic folk tales, or if you never went camping in your life, you will not know what I am talking about, but your elders will.

Cast a vote of confidence

Right-to-work is clearly a question of individual freedom of choice. Not a question of unions or non-unions, as the Idahoans Against Deception would have us believe.

There seems to be a lot of misleading information concerning the right-to-work law. Leading the pack of incorrect information is from people who contend the right-to-work proposal is "so-called."

What is "so-called" about any law? Right-to-work is a law, not a proposal endorsed by the Idaho Attorney General, passed by our elected representatives, and enacted into law Jan. 31, 1985.

The representatives who passed the law were voted into office by we the people. Our collective voice has been heard through our elected representatives. If we the people do not like legislation our representatives pass, we can freely remove those lawmakers from office through the electoral process. For the most part, our elected officials represent the wishes of the majority of Idahoans. If for no other reason than to give our representatives a vote of confidence in their lawmaking judgments, I recommend you register to vote, and exercise that individual freedom with a yes vote on Referendum 1.

No excuse for this error

I couldn't believe my eyes when I read about Governor John Evans nearly blowing Idaho's seat on the Pacific Fisheries Management Council.

When Senator McClure properly questioned Evans' late paper work on an issue crucial to Idaho, Evans' response in the Post-Register on Sept. 17 was that McClure was "a fool."

Who's the foolish one in this situation, governor? It was your mistake that caused the problem. I don't think there's any excuse for what Evans did or what he said.

Lottery often wins approval

The lottery is the only method of gambling that ever won the approval of all classes in this country. Look at some of the action seen in the U.S. in early times when prominent men ran the ticket offices and lent their family names and influence to the schemes.

Ben Franklin was one of the organizers of the Philadelphia Lottery in 1746. As late as 1820, the largest lottery shop in New York was owned by Aaron Clark, later mayor of the city.

In 1764, Rev. Samuel Seabury wrote his thanks to almighty God for winning ticket 5866 and prize of 425 pounds (less a vigorish of 15 percent).

Lotteries were private enterprises, but by 1760, lotteries were functioning in all 13 colonies and were being operated by municipalities, churches, public utilities and schools. Lotteries were a regular part of public financing. Columbia University was founded with funds from a lottery for that purpose. Other schools, now rich and famous, were helped by lotteries in their early years: Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Williams and the University of Massachusetts.

In our independence year of 1776, the Continental Congress authorized a lottery and tickets were ten to forty bucks. Prizes were to total $5,000,000. Conditions of war were too unfavorable and the scheme was pitched. A lottery was even planned and got underway to resolve President Jefferson's debts. His death in 1826 caused it to fade. Like the scrapings in the barn yard, this bull goes on forever and apparently there is no moralizing successfully on lotteries: Does Idaho want lotteries? Let John Q. decide and let us stop agonizing over theory.

Lottery tickets come down from $40 to $1, and the vigorish goes up from 15 percent to 60 percent (now called administrative costs) and all this in Harvard's span of only 350 years. We've come a long way in two or three hundred years, eh, babe?

Nation's work force, economic survival in danger

The American work force is in grave jeopardy, and so is our economic survival. As a businessman and as a citizen, that scares me. It should scare everybody else in this country, too.

American business will have to hire more than a million new service and production workers a year who can't read, write or count. Teaching them how, and absorbing the lost productivity while they are learning, will cost industry $25 billion a year, and nobody seems to know how long such remedial training will be necessary.

Three out of four major corporations already are giving new workers basic reading, writing and arithmetic courses, which big business clearly has the resources to do. Corporate training is bigger than our entire elementary, secondary and higher education system put together. Corporations already spend $210 billion a year on training — at Xerox we'll spend $210 million in 1986 alone.

It is a terrible admission, but $25 billion a year for remedial training has become a necessary added cost of doing business. It is a cost that I regret, because when business does, remedial teaching we are doing the schools' product-recall work for them.

Every year high schools across the country graduate 700,000 functionally illiterate young people — and another 700,000 drop out every year. In 16 states dropout rates range from 26 percent to 42 percent, and most big cities are at the high end of that.

Last year the Los Angeles unified school district's Dropout Prevention-Recovery Task Force did a study on the attrition rate. That's the difference between the number of 10th-graders in one year and the number of 12th-graders two years later. The study found an attrition rate of more than 60 percent in schools such as Belmont, Jefferson and Los Angeles High. Ten high schools had attrition rates as high as 50 percent.

What's worse, most of those who do stay in school don't learn enough to meet even minimum academic standards. A study by the National Assessment of Educational Progress found that only two out of 100 students across the country could draw correct inferences from a set of facts. Only one out of seven could write a good essay.

The problem cuts across the board, from poor, minority kids in inner-city schools to affluent, white kids in suburban schools. In 1972, 64,000 young people had SAT scores of 650 or higher. In 1982, that figure dropped by more than half to only 29,000. In math scores, the decline was 23 percent for the same group. We've made some progress in student performance and dropout rates over the last three years, but it's not enough — not by a long shot.

Even without the high cost of remedial training, industry's teaching expenses will keep growing, because we are entering an era of lifelong learning that merges work and education.

The pace of technological change today demands an educated work force.

Clearly, we have to rethink our education system from the ground up. Reform and reorganization are long-term goals that could take an entire generation to achieve. I don't think that we have that much time. Business has the biggest and most efficient training system in the world already in place, and we can use it to help bridge the gap.

In the long run, however, business cannot — and should not — provide basic education for its employees. That task belongs to the schools, and we've got to help make them do it and do it well. We have no choice, because the quality of our work force is a survival issue for America.

State troopers examine wreckage of Empire Builder cars after Wisconsin wreck Thursday

Train derails, killing fireman

FALL RIVER, Wis. (AP) — A passenger train derailed at a crossing Thursday, killing a crew member and injuring at least 19 people, officials said.

About 22 people were aboard the Empire Builder when it left the Soo Line tracks at 11:30 p.m. MDT, said an Amtrak spokesman, John Jacobsen in Washington.

"It just happened so fast," said a passenger, Ginger Murray of St. Paul, Minn., who was headed to Milwaukee. "We're all shook up. We were all thrown around quite a bit."

The train derailed while switching from one set of tracks to a parallel set, but the cause of the accident in this southern Wisconsin village, where about 850 people was not immediately known, Jacobsen said.

"Five cars that did not derail were private cars en route to a railroad convention in Milwaukee," said Pat Campion of St. Paul, Minn.

Ms. Campion said she is a member of the Minnesota Transportation Museum, and that her car was added to the train Thursday morning in St. Paul.

"It makes me reconsider my hobby," she said.

She said she was taking a nap when she felt the brakes being applied "real hard."

"I knew something was coming. We came to a real quick stop with a lot of clanking and banging," she said.

The dead man was a fireman in one of the locomotives, said Jacobsen.

Thirteen of the injured were treated at hospitals and released, and three were admitted, one in a serious condition and two in fair condition, said Columbus Community Hospital spokeswoman Marilyn Koshel.

Eight of the 16 taken to the hospital were crew members.

House moves to add agents to strengthen Border Patrol

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Thursday night passed a delicately balanced immigration bill built on two cornerstones: penalties for employers who hire undocumented workers, and amnesty for millions of illegal aliens who have established roots in the United States.

The vote was 230-166. Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said the House would move today to send the bill to a conference to reconcile differences between the measure and a Senate-passed bill.

Shortly before passage, the legislation barely survived a key test when the House turned back an attempt to eliminate the amnesty program. The amendment by Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla. failed 199-192.

In another controversial vote, the House defeated — 199-197 — an amendment by Rep. Matthew Fisher, R-N.Y., to eliminate a provision that would suspend the deportation of Salvadorans and Nicaraguans. They could stay in this country until nine months after submission of a General Accounting Office report on their status, expected to take two years.

Amnesty would benefit millions of nobody is sure of the number — who came to the country illegally before 1982, established roots, raised families and paid taxes in this country.

Fish called the proposal a "killer amendment" because the bill would have died had it passed. Supporters of the legislation said its delicate coalition of supporters would only hold together if the bill balanced amnesty with its program of penalties for employers who hire illegal aliens.

All told, lawmakers plowed through more than a dozen amendments to the bill, which was revised by a compromise — on foreign agricultural workers and kept alive by Congress' tardy adjournment.

One amendment added language to authorize a 50 percent increase in agents for the Border Patrol.

The amendment, approved by voice vote, would allow an increase of 1,500 Border Patrol agents over three years. Today, there are 3,700 agents, but only about 500 are available to patrol the 2,000 mile U.S.-Mexican border at any one time.

On Sept. 26, a version of the bill failed to survive even a procedural vote to keep it alive on the House floor. Now, members who worked out agreements in closed-door sessions said they believed this measure would pass.

Following the lead of previous immigration bills, including a version that passed the Senate last year, the legislation attempts to balance harsh enforcement provisions with protection of individuals.

Zaccaro denies guilt

NEW YORK (AP) — John Zaccaro pleaded innocent to bribery charges Thursday and his wife, Geraldine Ferraro, said his trial would end "the nightmare we've been living" since her race for vice president.

The charges involve a bribe Zaccaro allegedly demanded from a cable television company in exchange for a franchise in Queens.

The indictment charges that Zaccaro was peddling his influence with Donald Mones, the Queens borough president who committed suicide this year amid reports of corruption.

"I want to say in plain English that I'm simply and completely innocent and know that I will be found innocent," Zaccaro said after his arraignment. "I ask that you all bear with me — bear with us — to hold your judgment until a legal judgment is determined."

Zaccaro was released on his own recognizance after his six-minute court session. If convicted on the charges — one count of bribe receiving and two counts of attempted grand larceny by extortion — he could face a maximum of seven years in prison.

Ferraro, who said she had testified before the grand jury that indicted Zaccaro, traced her husband's legal troubles to the attention drawn to the family when she became the first woman vice presidential nominee of a major party as Walter Mondale's running mate in 1984.

Coast Guard attempts to empty flooded town

By The Associated Press

Coast Guardsmen boated door-to-door Thursday in a Missouri town to persuade residents to flee shoulder-high water, while Kaskaskia Island in the Mississippi River was emptied of people as two weeks of Midwestern flooding wore on.

About 20 families refused Thursday to leave West Alton, Mo., where the Missouri River was expected to crest later in the day.

"Flood punts are going to be there operating throughout the day, providing evacuation to the people who need it," Coast Guard Lt. Christopher Smith said Thursday.

Traffic to West Alton, Mo., had been cut off Wednesday, when the Missouri and Mississippi rivers overran levees on both sides of town. Still, most of the community's 430 residents refused to leave until early Thursday, said Smith.

Winnett Clark, 76, and his 74-year-old wife, Bonnie, were evacuated from their home in a helicopter, with Mrs. Clark carrying the couple's medicine.

"It was quite exciting," she said. "I enjoyed it."

The Mississippi River at St. Louis was expected to crest at 39.5 feet Thursday night, which although 9.5 feet over flood stage is a half-foot lower than had been predicted earlier.

The Corps of Engineers closed 20 of the 38 flood gates that protect the city.

Cocaine use up, other drug abuse levels off

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of Americans who use cocaine regularly has soared while sales of most other drugs leveled off in the 1980s, federal health officials reported Thursday.

A government survey conducted in 1985 found that 5.8 million Americans had used cocaine in the previous month, a 38 percent jump from the 4.2 million people reported in a similar 1982 survey.

But the eighth National Household Survey on Drug Abuse found little change in the number who used cocaine at least once in the past year. Their ranks grew only from 11.9 million in 1982 to 12.2 million.

Cocaine users are resorting to the drug more frequently, possibly as they exhaust what Dr. Donald L. MacDonald, head of the Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration, called a "grace period" for many young people before cocaine plays havoc with their lives.

MacDonald said the widening use of crack, a potent, smokable form of cocaine, is also cutting short any "grace period."

Vietnam veterans, family members stand together while looking at medals at memorial wall.

Vets, ex-Red Cross worker return medals, rap policies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Vietnam veterans and a World War II Red Cross worker gave up their medals Thursday in protest of U.S. aid to the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The veterans held a rally on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial and marched to the nearby Vietnam Veterans Memorial. Leaving in addition to their own awards, more than 70 medals, service ribbons and commendations renounced by other veterans from California to Maine.

Park police prevented the veterans from carrying signs or staging a demonstration at the Vietnam Memorial, but allowed them to set their medals in a neat row along the memorial's black granite wall and stand their arms around each others' shoulders, in silent meditation.

The veterans were accompanied by two yellow-and-white-garbed Buddhist nuns — and two Buddhist monks who beat prayer drums and chanted what they said was a prayer for world peace and justice.

Barbara Graves, 73, a Berkeley, Calif., psychotherapist and Quaker activist, returned a Bronze Star awarded in 1945 for her Red Cross work in setting up rest homes in France and England for wounded airmen. She said she is the first civilian woman to have won the award. She carried medals renounced by 33 veterans in two ceremonies in California.

"Working very closely with those combat airmen, I learned a lot about the sacrifices that young men make to pull off our government's policies," she said in an interview. "I'm completely disillusioned from any kind of patriotism I had in that era by the war in Vietnam and now by the war against Central America."

George Mizo, 40, of Boston, gave back a Purple Heart and a Republic of Vietnam Gallantry Cross. He and three other veterans have been protesting U.S. policy in Central America by fasting on the steps of the Capitol. He said he has lost 44 pounds since Sept. 1.

"We don't need medals for war. If anything, we need medals for peace," he said.

Arthur James, 37, a retired postmaster of Chewsville, Md., renounced a Silver Star awarded in 1970 after he pushed down members of his infantry patrol aside and received most of the shrapnel from a grenade.

Stephen Fougler, 45, a bookstore owner in Portland, Maine, returned two Purple Hearts awarded while serving with the Marine Corps in Vietnam in 1967 and 1968. He said he lost 18 pounds since returning from Vietnam and World War II veterans from Maine.

Police show video tape from plane before fatal stunt parachute jump

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A man clad in a white dinner jacket who jumped to his death from an airplane at 10,000 feet was wearing a homemade parachute that required him to open his shirt and pants for it to deploy, authorities said Thursday.

Two video cameramen hired by the unidentified man recorded his fatal leap, which apparently was a planned stunt.

The videotape, released by police Thursday, showed the man shoving himself out of the door of the plane as the pilot and a passenger made a desperate grab for his hand disappearing into the darkness.

His chute, which had no ripcord, only partially opened before he slammed into the desert Monday night, said homicide Lt. Paul Conner.

"The chute fit on the front of the body and he would have had to loosen his shirt and pants and unfold the thing like a towel and cast it up in the air," said Conner. "It looks like the strings started twisting and wrapping up. This in turn caused some of the fabric of the chute to shred."

The chute had no markings and was not legally manufactured in this country, said Conner.

It could take days or weeks to establish the jumper's identity, said Ron Fild, chief deputy for the Clark County Coroner's office.

The jumper began the videotape by introducing himself as Dr. Joe Hams and saying, "We're here at the Las Vegas airport tonight. I'd like to invite you to come for a little flight with us."

He then asked notary Charlotte Richards to identify him. Fild said she was a minister, the man responded. "That's a nice profession. Lots of happy people around."

"We're going to fly around Las Vegas," the man said. "We'll try to go out into the desert."

The man then looks at his watch and said, "We're about an hour late. I wonder if we can see what we want to see. Maybe we'll have something to look forward to."

In the air, the videotape showed the man sitting down briefly, then shoving the door open and sliding out. Ms. Richards' hand is seen grabbing for the man and she cries "Oh my God!"

The pilot grabs for the man's hand, just missing it by an inch as it disappears.

Mrs. Richards begins to cry and the squawk of the airplane radio can be heard in the background. The lights of Las Vegas can be seen in the distance and the camera continues to roll as the lights of the runway then emerge over the nose of the aircraft.

Lieutenants of LaRouche stay in jail

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A federal magistrate on Thursday ordered two top lieutenants of political extremist Lyndon LaRouche held without bond, citing "clear and convincing evidence" that they obstructed justice.

Presenting evidence in a detention hearing, the government revealed that one of the 10 LaRouche associates arrested Monday, former Ku Klux Klan leader Roy Frankhouser, had begun cooperating with authorities and described conversations he had with LaRouche himself.

The government presented copies of memos that Frankhouser said he had sent to LaRouche and other top followers in 1984 suggesting that any incriminating financial records be burned.

The magistrate, W. Harris Grimsley, granted the request of government attorneys that Jeffrey and Michelle Steinberg be held pending an appearance in federal court in Boston on Oct. 20 on their indictment charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice.

U.S. Attorney Henry Hudson had argued that the Steinbergs were "the heart, the core" of an effort by LaRouche's organization to frustrate an investigation into allegations of credit card fraud by a federal grand jury in Boston.

Defection tide flows primarily to West

MOSCOW (AP) — The case of an American researcher who defected to the Soviet Union with his family is not unique — other Americans have come to this Communist nation in the past 70 years in hopes of finding a better life.

But despite Soviet restrictions on emigration, the tide of defections has flowed overwhelmingly from East to West, with hundreds of thousands of Soviets leaving.

Arnold Lockshin said he arrived in Moscow on Wednesday with his wife and three children because of U.S. harassment prompted by his opposition to Reagan administration policies. His decision to seek political asylum received wide coverage Thursday in the Soviet press.

Lockshin, 47, formerly of Houston, told Western reporters who called his hotel room Thursday that he would give no more interviews immediately. "Today is a day of getting ourselves put together," he said. "I don't want to say anything at this point now."

Lockshin said on national television Wednesday night that he and his family found it impossible to have a normal, productive life in the United States.

He claimed he was fired from his job as at St. Joseph Hospital's cancer research laboratory in Houston because of his opposition to Reagan administration policy.

The hospital said he was fired in August after six years of employment because of deteriorating performance on the job.

Like other defectors before him, Lockshin appeared on Soviet television to thank the Soviet government for granting him asylum.

The publicity was similar to that given American defectors in the 1960s who said they opposed U.S. involvement in the Vietnam War.

Lockshin's move, just days before the superpower summit in Iceland, gives the Kremlin a propaganda boost at a time when Soviets who have been denied permission to emigrate or join spouses in the West are trying to draw world attention.

The United States, unlike the Soviet Union and East bloc countries, does not restrict emigration. U.S. officials, while denying Lockshin's claims of harassment, said he was free to live where he chose.

That is not the case in the Soviet Union, which closely restricts the movement of its citizens. Nonetheless, hundreds of Soviet officials, athletes, entertainers, soldiers and sailors have taken advantage of visits to the United States and other Western nations to seek asylum. In addition, hundreds of thousands of Soviet Jews have emigrated to Israel and the West since the late 1960s.

The heaviest flow West-to-East flow probably occurred during the Great Depression of the 1930s. High unemployment prompted scores of people, many of Russian descent, to come to the Soviet Union because jobs and a minimum standard of living appeared guaranteed.

Many of the foreigners who came were sent to Josef Stalin's labor camps during the purges of the late 1930s.

Since World War II, defectors from the West have been welcomed with publicity, but soon settle down to an anonymous existence.

During the Vietnam War, some American servicemen defected to the Soviet Union and declared their disillusionment with U.S. foreign and domestic policies.

In 1967, four U.S. sailors appeared on Soviet television and spoke out against the United States' actions in Southeast Asia. In March 1968, a black Air Force staff sergeant identified as J.W. Wright told Moscow television he defected for the same reason.

Two National Security agents, Bernon Mitchell and William Martin, fled to the Soviet Union in 1969, citing "moral and political reasons."

Apartheid foes lose money line

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government decreed Thursday that South Africa's largest anti-apartheid coalition cannot receive foreign funds.

The group said it expects to be outlawed within a few months.

President P.W. Botha issued the order against the United Democratic Front under the Affected Organizations Act, which allows him to prohibit foreign funding of political organizations considered to be under foreign influence.

Botha's action froze 100,000 rand ($45,000) in UDF bank accounts, said Azhar Cachalia, its national treasurer. He said more than half the annual budget of "millions of rands" comes from abroad, most of it from Scandinavia and none from the United States or Soviet Union.

Cachalia told reporters the multiracial coalition, formed three years ago, will challenge the order in court next week.

He and the UDF president, Albertina Sisulu, are the only members of the 15-member national executive who have not gone into hiding or been jailed under the national state of emergency imposed June 12, 1976.

"This morning's proclamation will certainly hurt the UDF, but not to such an extent that it will be crippled," he said. "We fear that in the next few months we are certainly considering the possibility now that we are going to be banned."

Murphy Morobe, the front's publicity secretary and one of those in hiding, told The Associated Press: "It's part of the whole strategy to begin to emasculate the organization."

He said the UDF has about 2.5 million members in 850 affiliated civic associations, trade unions, church and student groups. The nation's most prominent anti-apartheid figures are among its supporters.

Information sharing may aid drug war

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico (AP) — U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III said Thursday that a 13-nation conference on drugs likely will lead to greater sharing of information about drug traffickers.

The conference that continues through today in this Pacific Ocean resort was suggested by Mexican President Miguel de la Madrid. It is the first time officials from so many nations of the Western Hemisphere have met to discuss ways to battle the international drug trade.

"I think that one of the most probable benefits to come from this is the sharing of intelligence and information about specific traffickers," Meese told reporters.

Earlier Thursday, de la Madrid inaugurated the conference of Mexico, the United States and 11 other Latin American and Caribbean nations by urging greater international cooperation in the war against the drug trade.

"Let us avoid the danger of problems dividing us. We must look for a solution that unites us," he said. "No country is safe from drug dependence. We must be on the alert."

Meese told a news conference that a mutual legal assistance treaty between the United States and Mexico is virtually complete and would be ready by year's end.

The treaty would allow the two nations to help each other provide evidence and take testimony in criminal and civil cases, and Meese said he hopes other nations will become "interested" in such an alliance with the United States.

Meese said that during the first closed-door session of the conference, officials discussed ways the United States could help other nations fight drug trafficking. He declined to say if the use of U.S. military personnel was considered.

What's what?

Q. How old is the wedding rhyme that goes "Something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue?"

A. Maybe 100 years. Not ancient. Recall the third line: "And a silver sixpence in your shoe." It's a rhyme that's been around for a long time. To complete their costumes, most brides also need "old" and "new," and "blue" was easy to find.

If the ovary is "taken out" of a common barnyard hen, she turns into a rooster. I read that somewhere. Not in Chicken Little. Later.

Can you contradict a claim of yesterday that nobody either in Hawaii or Alaska ever has been struck by lightning? Suspect it's an outdated report.

If you ever need a helping hand, you'll find one at the end of your arm. Sam Levenson said that.

TRADEMARK

Q. What's the world's oldest known trademark?

A. "Vesuvium." It was on wine jars recovered from Pompeii debris after the Vesuvius eruption of 79 A.D.

SEVERAL WIVES

Men in West Africa oftentimes had two or three wives. So thereabouts a half-a-hundred-years-ago, when a man introduced you to his brother, a proper response was: "Same Ma? Same Pa?"

Q. Unauthorized biographers say President John F. Kennedy usually pulled his pants on even before he got out of bed. Was he always in a hurry?

A. Bad back. Seven out of 10 U.S. lawyers are in private practice. Half of those are in private practice. Half of those are in private practice.

Newman, paper in towering tussle over actor's height

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Paul Newman and the New York Post are locked in a tussle over the Blue-Eyed One's height, and there's no absence of malice.

The dispute started last week, when the Post noted on its Page Six personality column that Newman had been described in the New York Times Magazine as "a lean 5-foot-11."

"Anyone who has met Paul face to face says he has never hit 5-foot-11 except in heels," columnist Richard Johnson wrote. "Page Six hereby offers $1,000 to Newman's favorite charity or political candidate for every inch he measures over 5-foot-8 bare foot."

Newman came back Wednesday with "something even more hard-bill." He told WNBC-TV's "Live at Five" that he's willing to write the Post a $500,000 check if the verdict is his: 5-foot-8.

"If they're wrong, though, then now we start playing some hardball. It's not $1,000 an inch — it's $100,000 an inch, or $25,000 the quarter inch" for every fraction over 5-foot-8," he said.

The Post did not respond Thursday, but executive editor Frank Devine could not resist the opportunity for a few puns based on Newman's movies.

"We smell a sting," he said. "Maybe even a hustle. As good people players should, we are taking our time to review the play so far."

Infamous Chicago boss turns into lightweight

CHICAGO (AP) — No one ever accused Al Capone of being a softy. But in soft-sculptor Rox Sexner's hands, the infamous Chicago crime boss is a lightweight — 10 pounds of pillow with a painted face.

For $600 you can take home Capone or a life-size replica of talk-show host Oprah Winfrey, crusty Chicago Tribune columnist Mike Royko, or any of the 10 Chicago celebrities in Ms. Sexner's gallery.

Ms. Sexner, 46, said she works from photos as she builds the dolls in her studio in suburban Northbrook from stuffed flannel. She paints features on satin faces and tops them off with wigs ordered to match the subject's hair.

The clones, as she calls them, went on display this week at a gift shop in the downtown Water Tower Place shopping center.

A smiling Al Capone, James Thompson doll perches atop a case of Chicago Bears paraphernalia. Mayor Harold Washington and former Mayor Jane Byrne sit near the door. Royko hangs from a wall along with local television newscaster Bill Kurtis.

Miss Winfrey is between them in an evening gown. The color? Purple.

Bond loses campaign, turns to lecture tours

ATLANTA (AP) — Coming off his first election defeat in 20 years, Julian Bond says he'll go straight from the campaign trail to the lecture circuit.

"I'm going to keep speaking because I need the money. I suffered a big income loss over the summer, so I've got to try to recoup that," he said.

Before his upset in the Democratic primary for a seat in Congress, Bond averaged about 60 political lectures a year at about $2,000 — minus expenses — per appearance.

With his term in the Georgia state Senate expiring, Bond also plans to resume his syndicated newspaper column and radio commentary.

Veteran Duke goes for ride in stolen car

BALTIMORE (AP) — Duke, a seven-year veteran of the police department's K-9 corps, is being re-evaluated after allowing a thief to drive off with its human partner's patrol car.

The dog was in the police cruiser when it was taken, and apparently did not object, according to investigators.

The patrol car was recovered shortly after the theft, and a 19-year-old man was arrested, police said. The dog had maintained his composure throughout the incident.

"We don't know what happened to the dog," said police Agent Arlene Jenkins. "The guy was pretty lucky. The dog could have seriously attacked him."

Kids pretend flour part of drug sale

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Some grade school youngsters have a new game in which they put flour in bags and pretend to sell it to each other.

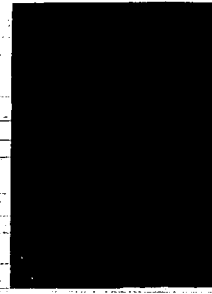

They call it "playing cocaine."

"I'd say it's a sign of just how penetrating the cocaine problem has become," said Dr. Donner Dewdney, a child psychiatrist.

"I can't say it's surprising because there is so much glamour associated with cocaine. An 8-year-old is going to pick up on that."

Contemporary comedy due to film in Florida

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — A contemporary romantic comedy starring Rob Lowe will be filmed here beginning in December, representatives for film producer Dino De Laurentis have announced.

Mark Indig, location manager for De Laurentis Entertainment Group Film Studios in Wilmington, N.C., said director Peter Bogdanovich will begin filming the movie, "Double Duty," in December.

Lowe will play a drifter who returns to his hometown. He gets called for jury duty for a trial involving his sixth-grade sweetheart, a part not yet cast. The two fall in love and the movie has a happy ending.

The producer is most interested in filming scenes at the old city's historic Castillo de San Marcos National Monument, the downtown plaza, the square in front of the Lighter Museum and Flagler College.

The film also will feature a chase scene through the downtown streets and attractions, Indig said.

Harris discovers magic entrancing as Camelot

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — If actor Richard Harris disappears during his next performance of "Camelot," the credit or blame may go to Dick Stoner, owner of a Fort Wayne magic novelty and costume rental shop.

Harris, in town as star of the play, took some quick magic lessons from Stoner Wednesday and practiced making coins appear to disappear.

The craggy actor's audience consisted of the shop owner, a few half-interested employees, an occasional curious customer and several shelves of eyeless masks of Dracula, Frankenstein's monster, Olive Oyl, Howard the Duck and so on.

Pressed by Harris to provide a simple trick, Stoner produced a small plastic box containing a tube with a different symbol on each side.

Turning his back, he told Harris to choose, pick a symbol and place the cube in the box with his favorite symbol facing the lid. Time after time, Stoner and guessed which symbol Harris had chosen, totaling $103.16.

But learning its secret, Harris pronounced the trick simple enough to do along with merchandise totaling $103.16.

Idaho Judges may order modified payment

BOISE (AP) — Judges may order future modifications in child support payments in the original decree, the Idaho Court of Appeals says.

The court on Thursday unanimously ordered new proceedings in an Ada County divorce case, Shelley Smith Brazier versus Roger Milton Brazier, although it upheld a magistrate's authority to order a future increase in child support payments.

Magistrate L. Alan Smith approved child support payments of $250 per month for two minor children, with the stipulation that when the oldest reached age-14, the payments for both would increase to $300 per month. Smith reasoned that it is more expensive to pay for teenagers than for minor children, court records show.

Brazier appealed, claiming that Idaho law gives magistrates no authority to order future modifications in support agreements. But in an opinion written by Justice Donald Burnett, the court disagreed.

"Support obligations necessarily are determined with an eye to the future," the court said. "Needs and resources are not static; they are dynamic."

"If a judge finds that the needs of a child or a former spouse are likely to change in the future, there is no logical reason to deprive a judge of authority to prescribe a payment schedule containing future adjustments," the order said.

If a judge's assessment turns out to be wrong, either side may return to court to seek an adjustment, the court said.

"To deny this power, in cases where the judge can determine the likely evolution of needs and resources, would condemn the parties to suffer needless cost and stress of periodic proceedings to update their decrees."

Although the magistrate has authority to order future modifications in support payments, the Court of Appeals ordered the magistrate to make a more specific finding that the need for child support payments would increase in the future.

The case also was sent back to lower court for further proceedings in other areas.

The magistrate ruled that the family home and stock in a family business, Mountain States Microfilm, Inc., were roughly equal in value, and awarded the wife the home and the husband the business.

The Court of Appeals ruled there was insufficient evidence to value the business at about $100,000.

The court upheld a ruling that the wife's one-third interest in another business, Wyndemere Co., was her separate property. But it ordered further proceedings to determine if the husband was entitled to compensation for taxes paid by the marriage on retained earnings of the corporation.

Paying for highways next, Symms declares

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — The legislative fight against requiring states to raise the drinking age to 21 — or suffer a big loss of federal funds — is over, Sen. Steve Symms told the Idaho Association of Commerce and Industry.

"We fought the good fight," but the state now has to think hard about how it will pay for road construction, the first-term Republican told business leaders meeting Wednesday in Coeur d'Alene.

Idaho lost $4.5 million in federal highway money this month because lawmakers so far have refused to raise the drinking age from 19.

The penalty will double next fall if the change is not made, but the money can be recovered once the age is raised.

Although a highway users study indicates more than $1 billion in needed road work already is backed up, Symms said the state cannot afford to lose any that could go for those projects. The alternative is again raising the fuel tax — "already one of the highest in the West."

"Legislatively, the fight's over," Symms said. "If Congress were to reverse itself, you'd have to wait about 10 years to try it, till you had a whole new bunch of people in there."

Gov. John Evans, challenging Symms for the Senate in the Nov. 4 election, has pressed in the past to raise the drinking age. Officials now believe lawmakers will comply next winter since the government has made good on its threat to withhold the money.

Symms said he still thinks the issue is one that should be left to the states, but predicts it will be a decade before Congress could be convinced to repeal the requirement.

Boiseans pay to have personal bricks laid

BOISE (AP) — Almost 500 Boise residents have paid $20 each to have their names engraved on bricks to be placed in a public downtown plaza.

The plaza, with the first 500 personalized bricks laid at its center, is to form the core of a new complex of restored buildings, public areas, offices and shops and retail malls envisioned by the Boise Redevelopment Agency on an eight-block section of downtown.

The BRIA plans to build the $900,000 plaza as the first phase in about $20 million worth of downtown improvements. Two private developers have signed agreements with the BRIA to develop properties surrounding the plaza, and five others are negotiating agreements.

Former legislator Bush dies

BOISE (AP) — Eugene L. Bush, 57, a former state lawmaker and former president of the Idaho Bar Association, died Wednesday in Idaho Falls of natural causes.

A partner in the legal firm of Anderson, Pike and Bush in Idaho Falls, Bush was president of the Idaho State Bar Association in 1981-82, a past president of the Ninth Judicial Bar Association, past president of the Idaho Association of Prosecuting Attorneys and former Bo-neville County prosecutor.

He also served on several Idaho Supreme Court committees, including ones that revised the appellate rules of procedure and drafted new rules of evidence. Both revisions remain in effect in the Idaho court system.

He was a native of Idaho Falls. Bush served in the Idaho House of Representatives in 1965 and 1967, where he was assistant majority leader of the House in 1967.

BLM bars vehicles on burn

BOISE (AP) — The Boise District of the Bureau of Land Management has closed burned areas of public land to motorized vehicles in portions of Gem, Payette and Washington counties and southwestern Idaho.

Dick Geier, BLM area manager, said the measure was necessary to protect the scorched areas from resource damage while fire rehabilitation is in progress.

"Specifically, the closure includes off-road driving as well as travel on roads and trails across burned BLM lands from the Adams County line on the north, Square Creek on the east, the Main Payette River on the south, and the Snake and Weyer rivers on the west.

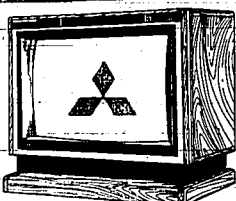

Tens of thousands of acres in the region was blackened by a series of mostly lightning-sparked range and forest fires during August.

The closure will be in effect until further notice, Geier said.

P&Z to permit Universal dump site

Neighbors voice objections; 93 sign protesting petition

MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls County Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday unanimously approved a conditional use permit for a Universal Frozen Foods dump off Grandview Avenue despite overwhelming objections from nearby residents.

Residents said the dump site is just above the water table and they feared contamination of their wells from the waste. "If Universal contaminates wells is ready to be held responsible? The answer is yes," said Steve Tolman, Universal attorney. However, he said he suspected a criteria would have to be developed to identify the source of contamination.

"I came home feeling very defeated," said Rita Woodall of Gulch Lane. She opposed the dump and she said it appeared the commissioners didn't take into account the residents' feelings. People were so mad after the vote, they got up and walked out, she said. More than 40 people attended the hearing at the Judicial Annex.

The decision can be appealed within 10 days to the county commissioners, said Robert Pettigrove, chairman of the planning commission. "Some people were disturbed (by the vote) but some felt we did correct," he said.

The company's intention is to operate the dump site properly, said Randy Roberts, Universal's manager of environmental affairs. The permit will restrict the hours of the dump's operation and require Universal to post a $10,000 bond for reclamation, Pettigrove said.

Asked if the company intends to go ahead with the dump despite widespread hard feelings, Mike Johnson, plant manager, said "this is a chance for Universal to prove it can be trusted. We're not about to cause harm."

The company wants to dispose of soil, small potatoes, vines and rock left in potato trucks on 3.4 acres of a 120-acre site, located about 1 1/2 miles south of Addison Avenue West on Grandview Drive.

The company says using an abandoned railroad right-of-way cut at the site will shorten its disposal haul and save an unspecified amount of money. The waste is presently disposed of at the county landfill about seven miles south of Five Points. Universal also disposed of these wastes at another site but it switched to the county landfill temporarily, Johnson said.

French fries plant planned in Jerome

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

JEROME — After processing potatoes in Nampa for 14 years, Charlie J. Marshall of Jerome now plans to start slicing them into french fries at a second plant in his own backyard.

Western Idaho Potato Processing Co., controlled by the Marshall family, is proposing a frozen potato factory employing 120 workers at a site 1 1/2 miles south of Jerome.

"We'd like to have it ready for next fall, but we've got to get going if we are to be ready," Marshall said Thursday.

The company has asked county officials to rezone about 10 acres of commercial land along State Highway 79 for heavy industrial use. Jerome County's Planning and Zoning Commission is holding a public hearing on the request at 5 p.m. Oct. 27 in the Jerome County Courthouse.

The plant, planned to be slightly larger than the company's Nampa factory, will employ about 120 workers year-round, with a payroll approaching $1.5 million.

Once in operation, the factory will produce 40 million pounds of frozen french fries yearly, said Marshall, chairman and president of Western Idaho Potato Processing. It will use about 1 1/4 million (100-pound) sacks of raw potatoes from the Magic Valley.

The plant will dispose of wastes through a sewage plant at the site. Solids will be used as cattle feed. The remaining liquid wastes will be used to irrigate 80-100 acres of land at nearby Rose Charolais Ranch, documents filed with Jerome County authorities specify. The liquids will be piped across Highway 79 to the land.

Western Idaho Potato Processing previously irrigated land with wastes at its former Zillah, Wash., plant, Marshall said.

Mountain Empire Dairymen's Association won county permission earlier this year for a Jerome County cheese factory using a similar system, but then announced it would not build. Its proposal had been opposed by neighbors for more than two years.

Marshall, 77, said the company plans to start construction as soon as it obtains zoning approval. "We're ready to build," he said. He did not give a cost for the project, but said it easily will range into the millions of dollars. Western Idaho Potato Processing will finance the project internally and is not considering seeking industrial revenue bonding.

The proposed site once held a Marshall potato starch plant, which burned down in 1961 and was never rebuilt. The Tupperware Co.'s industrial zone is directly across the highway and a proposed heavy-industry zone flanks it on the west. The site is served by a Union Pacific rail spur.

Marshall highlighted the local supply of potatoes as a major factor in Western Idaho Potato Processing's expansion at Jerome.

"The best potatoes for processing are in the Magic Valley. We need size for french fries, you know, they have both size and quality," Marshall said.

Western Idaho Potato Processing markets its french fries to restaurants and other institutional customers nationwide. "Our heavy sales are in New York," he said.

The company will continue to concentrate on institutional sales, Marshall said. It markets the fries under a number of labels, such as Blue Diamond and Western Hills. The company has a very small mix of retail production.

Some of the processing equipment for the proposed plant will come from an abandoned company operation at 77th Ave. near Yakima, Wash. Western Idaho Potato Processing Co. is one of a number of Marshall-controlled food and agriculture companies. The family is the majority stockholder in the company, which now operates only the Nampa processing plant.

Other family operations are at Jerome. Marshall Warehouses Inc. is a bean and wheat warehouse, run by son Chuck Marshall. The family farms are run by Dick Marshall, cover 2,500 acres — with 400 in potatoes. C.J. Marshall Produce Co. was a fresh potato shipper, but no longer is active, said Chuck Marshall.

Gooding seeks to expand impact zone

By JANENE BUCKWAY
Times-News correspondent

GOODING — The city of Gooding is preparing to expand its impact zone for planning and zoning purposes. An area of impact extends city zoning laws into an unincorporated area around the city to ensure orderly growth. The zone allows city services to be extended to adjacent areas that might be annexed to the city. However, being in the impact zone does not mean the land will be brought into the city limits. It only provides for an orderly approach to annexation, should it become desirable, say city officials.

A public hearing on the enlarged zone will be held Oct. 29 at 8 p.m. at Gooding City Hall. Mayor Gene Heller told the City Council Monday the plan has been approved by the Gooding County Planning and Zoning Commission and will add Gooding Municipal Airport, the city waste water treatment plant and city-owned land at the county fairgrounds to the city impact zone. At present, the zone extends for one mile east and west of Main Street, to the Union Pacific Railroad right-of-way, which is basically the existing city limit on the north; and south to State Highway 26.

Under the new plan the northern zone boundary will be extended to the first crossroad north of the Big Wood River. On the west and south it will expand to include the airport and sewer plant as well as city-owned land at the old city dump site and land at the fairgrounds.

In other business at Monday's meeting, Heller told residents of the 5th Street and Nebraska Avenue area that several dangerous trees will be removed this fall, possibly before the end of October. Residents told the council they have been petitioning for two years to have the problem resolved and now "live in fear" because the 75-year-old trees are dead and threatening to fall on property and passersby.

Heller said the city has accepted a $1,059 bid to remove four of the dead trees and top the remaining few salvageable trees.

"It's a shame to destroy 75 years of growth if it is not necessary," and the good ones do enhance the property," he told the residents attending the meeting.

He said the city had to wait for the start of the 1986-87 budget year Oct. 1 to pay for the tree removal and now must make sure weather and water conditions are correct or topping the good trees could kill them.

Forest Service reshuts Jarbidge road

By MARK PRATTER
Times-News writer

JARBIDGE — The tiny hamlet of Jarbidge celebrated when the Jarbidge Canyon Road was reopened in mid-September by some local residents for economic and sentimental reasons. But now the U.S. Forest Service has closed the road again. "The townspeople are very unhappy; they are not going to let it go," said Helen Wilson, a long-time Jarbidge resident.

Jarbidge Canyon Road had been closed for a decade when some miners went in with a front-end loader and cleared away some debris. Townspeople said it was done to allow miners to prospect with equipment and to give residents a chance to use familiar scenic ground.

The road issue is reviving debate about how much of Nevada should be designated as wilderness.

Forest Service Ranger Robert Easton had said the issue has nothing to do with wilderness. The road, which is subject to cave-ins, was closed for safety reasons, Easton told The Times-News.

But Ron Grow, acting Humboldt National Forest supervisor, said the week that the road is in an area recommended for wilderness and will be managed that way until Congress makes a decision on wilderness designation.

The Forest Service is concerned about road settling from the unstable dirt road getting into the Jarbidge River. The edge of the road drops off into a steep mountain canyon sloping to the river.

Last week the Forest Service barred all vehicles wider than 40 inches, and put a locked gate up on the road, according to the Forest Service and Elko County Commissioner Roy Smith.

Burley approves pay raises

By RONDA TAYLOR
Times-News correspondent

BURLEY — The Burley City Council tied up loose ends of a law enforcement contract with Cassia County and approved pay raises for city employees during a meeting this week.

A total of $68,000 in pay raises was awarded using an employee raise schedule prepared by the council. The raises will be retroactive to Oct. 1, the start of the 1986-87 fiscal year.

The pay raises will mean a 3.8 percent increase in the amount spent on employee wages, but the increase will not be spread evenly across the board. Instead, the council awarded specific raises to specific employees.

City department heads were unaware of the actual figures until after council approval, according to City Clerk Bud Brueger.

Councilman Jim Roper said that the council examined the entire city pay scale in order to determine the increases. Most raises were modest, between $50 to $100 a month, and were already included in the budget, he said.

The council did determine that two or three employees at the bottom of the pay scale "deserved" a higher pay base and set raises accordingly, he said.

This is the first increase in city salaries in a couple of fiscal years, he said. All employees were given raises, and some of the raises were given for promotions.

In other business, several matters regarding the city and county contract for law enforcement services, which took effect Oct. 1, were finalized by the council.

Mayor Ken Frank was given approval to pay Cassia County a total of $67,700 in 12 monthly payments for the first year of service. The final amount was approximately $5,000 less than what had been tentatively requested by the county.

In addition, eight police vehicles and other police equipment will be transferred to the county as part of the contract agreement. Three other police vehicles were declared surplus and will be sold by City, Roper and city residents in month were named to a new law enforcement advisory council that will advise Sheriff Billy Crystal regarding police protection.

Jerome County 1st to sign contract with juvenile jail

Detention center now boarding a Jerome County youth

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

JEROME — A private juvenile detention center now is boarding a juvenile from Jerome County, the first county in the Magic Valley to sign a contract to use the facility.

Jerome County Commissioner Pam Smith said she and Commissioner Carl Montgomery signed the contract with the Southern Idaho Youth Center early last week because the risk of using the facility is much less than holding youths in the county jail.

"And, that's the bottom line to me," she said. "It (the decision to sign the contract) was not done without considerable thought. And, I would do it again."

Montgomery said, "Compared to what we have been doing, it's a much better set-up. It's a good deal."

Henk Bekker, the other county commissioner, didn't sign the contract. Bekker is the office manager at the center, located on U.S. Highway 93.

Sheriff Etra Hall said he feels "good" that juveniles will be held at a center especially designed to hold them. Now the center is holding one juvenile for the county.

State law calls for the commissioners to provide a place to house juveniles, and they have "OK'd" the center, he also said.

With the contract, the county is guaranteed space for youthful inmates at a cost of $40 a day per juvenile. Smith said the county has budgeted $10,000 to spend on juvenile detention for the new fiscal year. The center, owned by former Twin Falls County corner Cloyce Edwards, is the subject of a pending appeal by a group of neighbors who claim the operation needs a special zoning permit, similar to a day-care center or shelter home, to operate.

Zoning officials previously said the operation was consistent with the commercial zoning of the area.

Because of the commercial zoning question, however, the commissioners put in the contract a clause that would allow them to terminate the agreement if the P&Z Commission rules the center can't operate without a permit, Smith said. Until such a finding is made, if any, the county will use the center.

"We wanted there to be some concrete support for the facility," Smith said of the contract. But, more importantly, the commissioners saw other counties, including theirs, hold juveniles illegally because the jails are not adequate to hold youths, she said.

"When the counties began talking about a year and half ago, about the need for a regional youth facility, it became clear to me that a public facility wasn't going to happen," she said.

Fifth District Magistrate Court Judge Roger Burdick of Jerome said he doesn't know of any jail in the Magic Valley that would meet all the state standards for holding juveniles.

The center is better than the alternative of holding youths in the county jails, he said.

Montgomery said the cost of holding the youths in the center would be offset by savings elsewhere. For example, Hall had to hire extra help when he held juveniles, the commission said. Smith said that holding juveniles in the center will free up space to hold a few county prisoners

Gentleman pans pregnant waitress

DEAR ABBY: A few weeks ago my wife and I had dinner out to relax and forget about cooking. In the cocktail lounge of this very nice restaurant we were served by a pleasant young lady who was well along in her pregnancy. Then in the dining room, an equally pregnant young lady served us dinner.

I believe that women and children are important — to be loved and cherished — but being served by two pregnant women in one evening was, I thought, a little too much.

My wife had a "so what?" attitude. I was upset. Do you think my reaction was wrong? And if so, why?

—STORK-RAVING MAD
DEAR MAD: As a man who claims to "love and cherish women and children," perhaps the sight of two pregnant women working so far along in their pregnancies made you feel guilty. Or were you embarrassed to be reminded of how babies get here?

If you still cling to the notion that pregnant women should not show themselves in public, consider this: Pregnant waitresses would rather be home cooking their swollen feet, but they continue to work because they need the money. Examine your feelings. Then you will know why you were upset.

DEAR ABBY: I have a mother-in-law problem. When "Joe" and I announced our engagement, his mother gave us a down comforter. It wasn't a new one; it was one she had had for a long time that belonged to her mother. My own mother gave us a brand-new down comforter, not knowing that I had already received one.

Joe and I have been married a year and we're using the comforter we got from my mother. My mother-in-law was at the house yesterday and noticed that we were using the new comforter, so she asked me to give the one she had given us to her daughter who didn't have any.

Abby, the one from my mother-in-law has a lot of sentimental value attached to it, and just because we're not using it doesn't mean we don't want it. I suppose you'd call me selfish if I have two and refuse to give one to my sister-in-law who doesn't have any, but I don't really think I am. What should I do?

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

—ON THE SPOT
DEAR ON: Once a gift is given, it becomes the property of the recipient to use, put away, throw away, sell or whatever.

However, with two comforters, you have more comfort than you can use, so why not give one to your sister-in-law to warm and comfort her? Are you to keep them both, if would not call you "selfish," but there's much to be said for keeping peace in the family.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 17-year-old guy with an important question. Why are your readers so hung up on sex? I like your column, but it seems that about one-third of your letters are about sex.

Personally I think bowling is a lot more fun. Judging from the few times I've had sex, I thought it would get more enjoyable, but it didn't.

Unfortunately, high school peer pressure about this overrated activity is still with us. "Who did you score with?" is still a hot topic at school.

I think sex is boring. Besides, with AIDS to worry about, it's not worth the risk. Also, the world already has more people than it can feed.

Give us more letters about people who are too fat, too tall, too short or were born on Christmas. Or hassles with the phone company, the neighbor's dog barking at 3 a.m. — anything besides sex for a change.

—OPTING FOR ABSTINENCE

DEAR OPTING: Thanks for the candid input. I appreciate knowing my readers' preferences. Readers?

Twin Falls blood donations fall short of 120-pint quota

TWIN FALLS — Twin Falls donors failed to meet the 120-pint quota at the blood drawing this week at the Presbyterian Church.

Ann Livingston, chapter manager, said 109 pints were given Monday and 101 on Tuesday. There were 12 first-time donors.

Curtis Smith received his 14-gallon donor pin; Lowell D. Kuykendall, 13 gallons; Dick Chilcote and Harold Billings, 10 gallons; Gene Dilling, seven; David E. Rearick, six; Mike Hachquet, five; JoAnn Packer and Dale Molesworth, four; Tony Baird and Connie Wright, three, and Thomas Candelaria, two.

Farewell to farewell parties

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the effects of the fears of terrorism toward travelers is the end of the gala bon-voyage party on ship cruise lines, reports Travel Agent magazine.

Security requirements at passenger terminals are blamed for the fading out of the old tradition, as many ship lines no longer permit visitors aboard vessels in port.

Cruise lines now install metal detectors and X-ray machines through which passengers must pass and friends and relatives must see each other off — from the dock.

Ojeda revives Mets' pitching game

By JOHN NELSON.
The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The pitching pendulum swung to New York just in time Thursday night as the Mets beat Nolan Ryan and the Houston Astros 4-1 in Game 2 of the National League playoffs.

Bob Ojeda scattered 10 hits for the Mets as he matched his finesse against Ryan's power, sending the best-of-seven series to New York tied at one victory apiece.

Keith Hernandez had two hits, including a two-run triple for the Mets and Manager Dave Johnson called that the killing blow as New York's potent offense finally ground into action.

"This was a big win obviously," Hernandez said. "But if you say we have the edge now, I disagree. We have a great deal of respect for Houston. This is one of the greatest playoff matchups, and the two best pitching staffs in the league."

BOBBY OJEDA
Scatters 10 hits

"We're just glad to get out of here with one win and get the home fans behind us."

Held without a run in support of their ace, Dwight Gooden, in the first game Wednesday night, New York's tablesetters, Len Dykstra and Wally Backman, got the Mets going against Ryan. And the big hitters — Hernandez, Gary Carter and Darryl Strawberry — applied the throttle.

Hernandez also had a single, and he scored a run. Carter had an RBI double, and Strawberry drove in a run with a long sacrifice fly. Backman had two hits, scored twice and drove in a run. And Dykstra had two hits and scored once.

"Early in the game, it was tough because we never hit our stride yesterday," Ojeda said. "We knew we had to win. Ryan came out pitching the way he does, and we were a little nervous."

"We broke the ice in the fourth, and you could almost hear a sigh of relief. We hit our stride and boom. We went out in the fifth and got a hit and you could feel the positive momentum."

Ojeda, 35, during the regular season, struck out five and walked two — baffling and beleaguering Houston's hitters with his slow curve, changeup and occasional fastball. He flirted with trouble often, but the Astros managed just one run.

The Astros, wasting one chance after another, did not score until the seventh on Phil Garner's RBI single. By then, it was too late.

"We had a lot of hits, just not at the right times," Houston's Hal Lanier said. "Ryan threw well velocity-wise, but I didn't think he got his pitches where he wanted them. But the Mets have been successful against a lot of people. That's how they won 108 games. They've got a lot of fine pitchers, and if you make a mistake, they hit the ball."

After a day off Friday, the series resumes Saturday with Ron Darling, 35-6, of New York facing Bob Knepper, 17-12, for Houston.

Beaten 1-0 in Game 1 by Mike Scott, the Mets scored their first two runs in the playoffs in the fourth inning against Ryan, then nailed baseball's all-time strikeout leader for three more in the fifth. Held to a 100-pitch limit during the latter part of the season after coming off his second tour on the disabled list, Ryan could now work as long as he was able, Lanier said.

Ryan was gone after five innings, lifted for a pinch hitter, coming off a 5-1 finish during the regular season. Ryan had given up five runs on seven hits, striking out five.

Ryan, 32, during the season, had fired the first 19 batters, one shy of the playoff record, when he got Dykstra to ground out to first leading off the fourth. Vida Blue set the record of 11 consecutive outs at the start of a game for Oakland in 1971.

But, on a 2-0 pitch, Backman got the Mets first hit, a bouncing single up the middle, and Hernandez followed with an 0-2 single, a soft liner that sent Backman to second. Carter, then hitless in four at-bats and fanned three times by Scott in Game 1, doubled off the wall in right-center, scoring Backman and sending Hernandez to third. Hernandez scored on a sacrifice fly to deep left field by Strawberry, and the Mets led 2-0.

The Mets scored three more times after Ryan's exit. Backman singled in the fifth. Rafael Santana singled with one out, and Ojeda, attempting to sacrifice, bunted into a forceout. Dykstra slapped a Ryan curveball into left field for a single that sent Ojeda to second, and Backman drove in a run with his second single.

Dykstra wound up at third, and Backman went to second on the play when center fielder Billy Hatcher's throw was up the third-base line and past-catcher Alan Ashby, for an error. Hernandez then hit a line drive

Tigers, Gooding duel in northside tradition

By MICHAEL VANAUSDELIN
Times-News writer

GOODING — Let's forget that both teams are coming off big victories and are ranked among the top five teams in their respective divisions. Let's forget that the 5-1 Gooding Senators are rated third in Class A-3 by The Associated Press and that the 4-2 Jerome Tigers are ranked fifth in Class A-2.

Let's also forget that Jerome is an A-2 school and Gooding is A-3 — it doesn't matter. Rankings, win-loss records and classifications simply don't matter; what does matter is that the Jerome Tigers are coming into Gooding tonight to play the Senators and are defending A-3 champions are ready.

Game time is 7:30 p.m. Early last season, the Senators lost a heartbreaker to Jerome 27-26, due mostly to the 273 rushing yards piled up by Tiger halfback Tracy Black. Gooding went on to win the state A-3 championship but the memory of the loss to Jerome still lingers. And now, with Black graduated and Gooding confident, "We really want to play (Jerome)," says Gooding head Coach Jeff Jeffries.

No one knows that more than Jeffries' former teammate at Idaho

State University, Jerome head Coach Joe Mattie.

"They (Gooding) really like to play Jerome," he said. "The whole A-2 vs. A-3 stuff gets thrown out the window in this one. This will be a tough game."

Even though both sides expect a hard-fought game, it might be tougher contest than anyone expects.

Jerome plays a pro-style offense, keyed to running back Jay Ostler and quarterback Mike Welch, running the ball often and "smacking it with the pass," says Jeffries.

The Tigers use several people offensively, and even after Ostler's three touchdowns in Jerome's 41-0 upset over Shelley last week, Jerome will still run a balanced attack.

"Jerome runs more than people realize," said Jeffries. "But their offensive strength is Joe's offense and (offensive coordinator) Ben Allen's playcalling. Just when you think you have their running game stopped, they run a draw play or throw a screen, and you're dead."

Game of the Week

If teams think the Tiger's offense can kill, the defense is Armageddon — in the last three games, Jerome hasn't given up a touchdown. Just how effective Jerome's 4-4 defense is — a defense that blitzes "all night," said Jeffries. "They constantly shoot their linemen, and it's difficult for any offense to handle."

Gooding plans to counteract the blitzing with a misdirection-running game, "cutting half your defense off from the play," said Jeffries. "We're going to play with a line that returned intact from last year's championship team" and is the best around," said Mattie.

Like Jerome, the Senators complement their running game with the threat of the pass — and in the case

Filer, Wendell vie for trip to playoffs

By MICHAEL VANAUSDELIN
Times-News writer

WENDELL — The cliché has always been that the best football teams thrive on pressure. If that's true, the Wendell Trojans and the Filer Wildcats will find out just how much pressure they can take tonight as they hook up in an important Canyon conference duel.

The winner of Friday's contest will have the inside track for one of District 4's two berths in the Class A-3 playoffs. That, of course, is assuming Gooding continues its winning ways and maintains its undefeated conference record, although the Trojans, 3-0, will play, will have something to say about that on Oct. 24 (when the Senators come to town).

Meanwhile, the Wildcats (2-1 in conference play) know this is the game they need to win at all costs.

"This is the game," said Filer head Coach Wade Quisenberry. "It's the biggest game a Filer team has had in awhile."

Game time is 7:30 p.m. The Wildcats have been the surprise team in the Canyon Conference, winning four games with a strong running game led by Mike Teater.

Unfortunately for Filer, though, Teater may miss tonight's game due to an ankle injury — or make that, injuries; both ankles are sprained and Teater has been "hobbling all week," said Quisenberry.

With Teater out and Bart Conn replacing him, the rushing duties are left up to Jared Conrad. But Wendell Head Coach Shawn Conner expects the Wildcats to "throw the ball" about 70 percent of the time.

To prepare for Filer QB Mike Brady — and company, the Trojans have been working with a lot of different coverages in practice," said Corrigan. If the Wendell coach is Tigers beat Bees; share Gem State crown with T.F.

By The Times-News

IDAHO FALLS — Idaho Falls High's volleyball team scored a 15-0, 15-7 victory over Bonneville here Thursday night to nail down a share of the Gem State Conference championship, along with Twin Falls.

Both teams ended the regular season with 16-2 records. They split their two regular-season meetings, with the Tigers winning here and the Bruins winning in Twin Falls.

The GSC standings will have no bearing on the two teams' postseason schedule. Idaho Falls begins competition in the Region IV tournament here next Tuesday, Twin Falls will compete in the Region III tournament that commences next Thursday.

Good football to begin with," said Collier.

Camas' hopes center around an all-senior offense and virtually all-senior defense. Led by quarterback Joel Lamm, the Musers can turn his throwing arm or bank on the running game from the talented backfield duo of Todd Tupper and Carl Ashmead.

For Rockland, the key is the passing game — particularly the combination of quarterback Mike Steidley and end Reuben Figueroa.

Mushers can (probably) earn a ticket to state this afternoon

By BRAD BRELAND
Times-News writer

FAIRFIELD — The season could unofficially be over for either Camas County's or Rockland's football team this afternoon after the two squads meet here in a key Sawtooth Conference football game.

The survivor of today's 4 p.m. contest will more than likely nail down the Sawtooth Conference's second berth in the state eight-man playoffs.

The Mushers, ranked fifth in this week's Associated Press poll, and Rockland each have one loss in the conference. A second loss by either team would virtually eliminate it from a shot at the state crown.

A victory, however, would probably send that team along with Rockland to the state playoffs.

That's assuming that No. 1-ranked Rockland beats North Gem in Bancroft this afternoon. Should the Cowboys upset the Tigers, it would throw the Sawtooth race into a three-way tie among Rockland, North Gem and the winner of this afternoon's game here.

"The team that loses is out of the picture," said Rockland Coach Steve May, who watched his Rockland squad drop a 20-18 double-overtime game to the Mushers in the first week of the season in Rockland. That was a non-conference encounter.

The only league setback for both teams was a loss to Rockland. Camas County dropped a 20-8 decision, while Rockland was blasted 50-

0. May says those scores won't be indicative of today's game.

"It's going to be close," he predicted. "I'm pretty sure we'll win the game that way. We played Rockland early and we had some bad breaks in the game."

Camas County Coach Galen Collier agrees.

"It's going to be a big ballgame in all categories, you can't really use that (the games against Rockland) as a guideline," he said.

The scenario for today's contest is the same for both squads. The team that plays mistakes free football will probably come out on top and a trip to the state playoffs will be the reward.

Both coaches believe Camas' home-field advantage will be significant after Rockland's four-hour bus ride.

"It's tough to get off a bus, get dressed, and come out and play real good football to begin with," said Collier.

Camas' hopes center around an all-senior offense and virtually all-senior defense. Led by quarterback Joel Lamm, the Mushers can turn his throwing arm or bank on the running game from the talented backfield duo of Todd Tupper and Carl Ashmead.

For Rockland, the key is the passing game — particularly the combination of quarterback Mike Steidley and end Reuben Figueroa.

Weather looks cooperative for renewal of Rim-to-Rim Run

By STEVE CRUMP
Times-News sports editor

TWIN FALLS — The last two Rim-to-Rim Runs have clearly reminded participants that it's a fall event.

So this year's organizer, the Twin Falls YFCA's John Eschenburg, is more than happy to say that the forecast for Saturday morning's renewal of the 7½-mile fun run is for clear skies and temperatures in the 60s.

"Last year was just plain cold, and it kept the turnout down," he said.

"If we have a nice day Saturday, I think we should have a good turnout."

Race time is 10 a.m. Anyone planning to run in the event should register by 8:30 a.m. according to Eschenburg. No preregistration is necessary.

Eschenburg said about 30 runners had preregistered as of Thursday night. He said he expected between 125 and 150 runners in this year's event. Last year's field was 120, which ran in blustery west winds and 40-degree temperatures.

The defending champions are Henry Carvajal and Nicki Pool; both of Twin Falls. Eschenburg said

Thursday he wouldn't know north of Blue Lakes Grade to Golf Course year's top finishers would participate in this year's race.

The course for this race, which ranks with the mid-summer Falls-to-Falls Run as one of the Magic Valley's most popular, is challenging for a fun run. It starts at Blue Lakes Country Club and moves north up

Blue Lakes Grade to Golf Course

Road. That portion of the run covers only about 1½ miles, but it involves nearly 500 feet of vertical relief.

Once the runners reach Golf Course Road, they will turn east until they reach the Highway 27.

The course then moves south on 93 across the Perrine Bridge to Canyon Spr

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — A relieved Otis Anderson joined the New York Giants on Thursday, ready to accept any role with the club and looking forward to fulfilling a dream — going to the Super Bowl.

"I'm very excited to be going from a team 0-5 to a team 4-1 with a lot of potential to make the playoffs and go to the Super Bowl," Anderson said. "It's an opportunity for new life and a chance to be around an organization that believes in winning."

Pro football

Anderson, the 11th-leading all-time rusher in NFL history, was traded by the St. Louis Cardinals to the Giants on Wednesday for two 1987 draft choices.

It was a trade that surprised some people, but not Anderson. He had seen it coming since the Cardinals' first game of the season when new Coach Gene Stallings put him in a reserve role halfway through the game.

"From that point, I felt my services as a Cardinal would be limited," Anderson said. "I felt they were planning on using Stump (Mitchell) more and I didn't want to wait for an opportunity when I knew I could be a positive influence for some team."

Anderson could be an immediate influence with the Giants. They have been without running back George Adams, their No. 1 draft pick in 1985, since last season's season when he placed a big burden on Joe Morris.

Two weeks ago, with Morris out, Anderson was the Giants' reaction to the Cardinals' three running backs. "We've had only four backs on the roster and have been living on borrowed time," Giants Coach Bill Parcells said. "We went into the (New Orleans) Saints game with three backs and I didn't want to get into that again."

Anderson is only one yard shy of the 8,000-yard mark, and he needs only 82 yards to tie Larry Csonka for 10th place on the all-time NFL rushing list.

If Joe Morris and I wind up in the same "backfield" together, great," Anderson said. "If not then, still great. As long as the Giants are winning, fine. Whatever it takes to win."

Anderson has size, experience and the ability to run and catch, and Parcells said the club would use all his talents.

Meanwhile, the Giants placed defensive lineman Erik Howard on the injured reserve list with a broken hand.

Elway quickly making NFL forget all about Miami's Marino

By JOHN MOSSMAN
The Associated Press

DENVER — The best young quarterback in the game? Miami's Dan Marino usually gets the nod when the question is raised, but even Marino can't match John Elway's record over the past 2½ seasons.

Since he became the Denver Broncos' permanent starter 33 games ago, Elway has directed his team to a 29-9 record, a .763 percentage that betters Marino's .711 figure during that same period.

Chicago's Jim McMahon equals Elway's mark, but the Bears have proved that, with their defense and Walter Payton, they don't always need McMahon to win. Elway, on the other hand, is indispensable.

In 1985 he carried the Denver offense, setting club records for completions, attempts and passing yardage. He tied the entire NFL with 4,144 yards of total offense.

Last week's 27-20 victory over New England was a perfect example of Elway's value to his team.

He suffered through a nightmare first half, hitting on only six of 18 passes for 48 yards and throwing an interception that set up a Patriots touchdown. Gathering himself at intermission, he came out and completed 11 of 15 passes for 137 yards and a touchdown to rally Denver from a 13-3 deficit to a 27-13 lead.

"When he gets his act together, he is something," Patriots linebacker Larry McGrew said.

Elway admitted afterward he has never suffered through a more inconsistent half — not in high school, not in college, not even during his rough rookie season with the Broncos. He said his wisdom reminded him of a high school baseball game when he couldn't throw a strike, walked in the winning run and was yanked from the mound.

"I just couldn't get the ball to come off," he said. "The harder I tried, the worse it got. I couldn't hit anybody. I was if I just ought to go back into the locker room, come back out and start over."

Elway also was booed unmercifully by the usually adoring Broncos fans. His performance and the crowd's reception made it "real hard to come back out for the second half. It's not something you want to do, you have to lie down deep, I knew I had to get something going."

Catch Dan Reeves said Elway's second-half play was a sign of his growing maturity.

"He showed he's a true pro," Reeves said. "I should have put the bad play behind him and go on to the next. He put a bad half behind him and went onto the next."

By now, the velocity of Elway's passes has been the talk of the NFL.

Los Angeles Raiders cornerback Lester Hayes nicknamed "Elway" "Goose Gossage" after his first exposure to Elway's heat-seeking missile delivery. Last season, Hayes dubbed him John "Goose Gooden" Elway, but says now that name only applies at sea level.

"Denver's mile-high altitude," Hayes says. "He turns into John 'Roger Clemens' Elway. You get him at that altitude and he throws 90-mile-per-hour stuff."

In just his fourth season, Elway figures to overtake Craig Morton as the team's all-time passing leader.

Elway also is a dangerous scrambler — his 263 yards rushing last year led all AFC quarterbacks for the second straight season — and he has shown an ability to improvise on the run.

He has proved to be a leader, having been elected the team's captain on offense, and now appears totally in command of the Broncos' intricate offense which once baffled him. "If he has a fault, it is that he has yet to develop a consistent touch on short passes."

"He's only going to get better," Mike Shanahan, the Broncos' offensive coordinator, agrees. "I rank him as the best quarterback in the game right now, and he just keeps getting better and better."

'The Book' raising hackles at front offices throughout NFL

By DAVE GOLDBERG
The Associated Press

The book is called The League, and is subtitled The Rise and Decline of the NFL.

Around the NFL, it's known as "The Book."

The book was written by David Harris, a freelance writer, and is not for fans whose reading preferences run to on-the-field stuff — they must be content this year with the "autobiographies" of Mike Ditka, Jim McMahon, Mike Singletary and myriad Chicago Bears.

What Harris provides is power struggles, ownership machinations and court fights, with the centerpiece the struggle between Al Davis and Pete Rozelle in Davis' move of his Raiders from Oakland to Los Angeles. His thesis: that the NFL peaked in 1974 and has been going downhill. That's when, he says, owners began going their own way rather than subscribing to what he calls "League Think" — that the good of the league as a whole is more important than the good of any franchise.

There's little new here. Most of the material comes from newspaper articles, court transcripts and interviews with owners. And the premise of decline may be slightly exaggerated — it might have helped Harris if the NFL had been held liable for millions in damages rather than just $3 in the USFL's antitrust suit.

But Harris paints a fascinating picture of the internal political structure of the NFL and the people who run it or ran it. Without malice, letting the facts praise or damn; he manages to draw multi-dimensional portraits of Rozelle, Davis and about two-thirds of the NFL's owners.

Rozelle, trying with Tex Schramm of the Dallas Cowboys and Art Modell of the Cleveland Browns to hold the owners together, emerges as the most colorful, but feeblest man, rather than the ruthless, devious, conniver depicted by Davis and other critics of the commission.

Davis, however, is not the villain. A man obsessed with football and winning, he drops all that when his wife suffers a heart attack, getting a cot to sleep in her hospital room and taking to the phone to consult doctors all over the world.

For all the information, for all the compelling anecdotes, there are problems, including a number of small, but nagging, factual errors.

For one thing, Harris clearly knows little about football on the field. Matt Milten, the Raiders' linebacker, becomes "Matt Milley" and team records are "written" "twelve to four," "nine to seven" or "five to eleven," strange constructions.

Moreover, when Robert Irsay is considering moving his Baltimore Colts to Los Angeles, Harris said Rozelle dissuades him from it because it would disrupt the scheduling in the NFL's "Eastern Conference."

There are other annoying items. Few people below the level of owner are named except by their title.

Thus, when Irsay storms into the locker room to fire his coach on the spot, Harris simply identifies the man as "the coach," rather than Howard Schnellenberger. People from the NFL office, other than counsel Jay Meyer, are often cited but never identified, except as "a Rozelle assistant."

Still, for anyone desiring some insight into the personalities and egos of 23 millionaires, it's worth a try.

BYU finds self on brink of being eliminated from WAC title contention

The Western Athletic Conference, normally a two-or-three-team race at the midpoint of the football season and always involving Brigham Young University, is this year a six-team free-for-all which includes BYU — but just barely.

the Rams, at 1-1, have three games left against conference opponents. Only the Colorado State game is on the road.

Wyoming, which knocked off Air Force earlier, plays nothing but WAC games, winning four of five, but the Falcons nonetheless are at a scheduling disadvantage. To have a realistic shot, they must win their two remaining games, at San Diego State on Oct. 25 and home against BYU on Dec. 6, and then hope for some help.

With one less conference game than the other contenders, the Falcons can finish no better than 2-1. Any team finishing 2-1 will prevail since the title is determined on a percentage basis.

San Diego State, 2-0, and Wyoming, 2-0, are unbeaten teams in league play. The Aztecs' two victories, however, were against winless Utah and New Mexico, and their last five games are all against contenders. But only the Colorado State game is on the road.

"The best thing you can say about our defense is we have nowhere to go but up," said Utah Coach Jim Fassel. "We have so many things that need improvement that it's hard to put your finger on any one thing. Backing, mistakes, inconsistency, you name it."

UTEP, 0-2 in the WAC despite two early non-league victories, hopes to snap a three-game losing skid. It will be the Miners' fifth straight road game.

New Mexico, 0-3 in league play and 0-3 overall, looks to end a six-game losing streak. The Lobos suffered a rash of injuries in last week's 27-10 loss to Hawaii, but they should get quarterback Billy Rucker back. UNT has won its last 16 meetings with UTEP.

The 10-time WAC champion is 1-1 in league play, following a 24-20 loss to State. And four of those five toughest schedule remaining of any of the six contenders.

The Cougars must play five of their six remaining WAC games on the road. And four of those six games are against contenders (Wyoming, Hawaii, San Diego State, Air Force).

Because of the situation, an analysis of the WAC race at the halfway point isn't merely academic. Someone just might break BYU's stranglehold on the title.

Old loyalties persist in Smith family when it comes to BSU MISSOULA, Mont. (AP) — So much for family loyalty.

Lyle Smith, who spent 40 years at Boise State University as football coach and athletic director and helped build the Broncos into a Big Sky Conference football powerhouse, is also the father of University of Montana defensive coordinator Bill Smith.

But old habits die hard, so Lyle

Smith will root for the Broncos when they entertain the Grizzlies this Saturday.

"I told him (Bill) I hope they play well," Lyle Smith said. "But this is kind of where I started. I hope it's a great game, but I would be hard not to root for it."

Bill Smith says the game has special significance for him as well. "I hope we get after them," he said.

But the two Smiths agreed that normally they root for each other to win. Just this week, Lyle Smith, 62, the senior Smith, compiled a 156-26-12 coaching record and led Boise State when it was still a junior college. He became athletic director when Boise became a four-year school in 1967 and began building a program that could be competitive against Big Sky schools.

One of the last players Lyle Smith coached was his son, who went on to become a center at Oregon.

Bill Smith sees a parallel in Boise State's success with the success of his son. He hopes to have with new coach Don Read, Lyle Boise State two decades ago. Read will dedicate a new stadium this fall and has switched to a passing game that helps Montana compete against team it cannot match physically.

Boise State this fall, however, is a physical, run-oriented team. "My dad has warned me all along that Boise has one of the best teams they've ever had," the younger Smith said.

Jury finds in favor of Navratilova in photographer lawsuit

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (AP) — A Long Island jury found on Thursday that Martina Navratilova did not hurt a photographer when she grabbed his camera in a 1982 skirmish, but it did award him $50 for a roll of film she exposed.

The photographer, Arthur Seitz, 44, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., sued Navratilova for $2 million after she took his camera and exposed his film in a post-game incident at the U.S. Open tennis championship in New York City.

The jury found the top-ranked women's tennis player innocent of battery against Seitz and not responsible for a calcium deposit in his arm that his doctor said will require surgery.

Supreme Court Justice Lester Gerard had previously dismissed a $4.5 million countersuit filed by Navratilova, who said the incident had caused her mental anguish.

She testified during the trial that she took Seitz's camera and exposed his film after her quarterfinal loss to Pam Shriver because he refused to stop taking pictures of her after she had asked him to cease.

The skirmish took place 45 minutes after the loss, and after a news conference and other opportunities for photographers to take pictures.

Navratilova was at a tournament Thursday in Spain, but her attorney,

Edward Hart, said she would be "relieved."

Seitz was in Boston taking care of a business transaction when the decision was announced. Seitz, reached by phone, said the verdict was "certainly a disappointment. But I don't have any regrets about going forward with this thing, having been assaulted, attacked, injured and having had my camera broken and my film trashed."

"I was 20 feet away from her and I wasn't even taking pictures when I was attacked. It wasn't like I stuck a camera in her face. You'd really have to be stupid to do something like that."

Seitz's attorney, Marvin Mitchell, said he will appeal on the grounds that the judge improperly instructed the jury that it could only award damages if it found Navratilova committed a battery against Seitz.

"It's just so unbelievable to me that the judge would give them (the jury) so little latitude," Seitz said.

William Papandreas, the jury foreman from North Babylon, said the jurors felt Seitz "was nasty."

"I don't say what she did was right, but what he did wasn't right either," Papandreas said.

Seitz, 47, was the co-defendant in Garrison Security Corp. of Melville was not to blame for the incident. Seitz had charged that the security guards at the tournament failed to protect him and got in his way as he tried to retrieve his camera and film.

During the trial, Seitz's doctor testified that he would need surgery and rehabilitation that would cost more than $40,000 and that the injury resulted from the Sept. 7, 1982, altercation with Navratilova.

Seitz said he sometimes has to sleep differently than in the past because of the injury and he can't move his arm as freely.

Seitz admitted under cross examination that he did not go to a hospital for examination of the alleged injury until two weeks after the incident and that he had met with Mitchell before seeking treatment.

Navratilova testified during the trial that she never meant to injure Seitz.

Agency calls for strong U.S. farm research

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's plunging share of world agricultural trade is in part a reflection of poor performance in the area of high-value foods, increased global competition and the low competitiveness of some U.S. farmers, a congressional research agency said Thursday.

"Unless domestic research and development efforts are continued and strengthened, foreign competitors may develop production capacities that match those of the United States," said a report from the Office of Technology Assessment.

Agricultural trade has been the salvation of the U.S. trade balance in recent years, keeping a deteriorating situation from becoming far worse.

While farm exports have declined, they still represent the single largest positive influence on the balance of trade. Despite the decline, the United States will export $7.5 billion more worth of food than it imports this year.

And the ripple effect of farm trade on non-agricultural industry is substantial. About 60 percent of gains or losses in livestock trade and 45 percent of gains or losses in other farm products occur outside the traditional farming sectors, the report said.

"It's time we realize that the United States can no longer rely on agriculture to offset trade deficits in other sectors of our economy," Rep. Cooper Evans, R-Iowa, a member of the OTA-board, said in a statement.

"Current deficits in agricultural trade are viewed as an aberration by some who cling to the perception that U.S. productivity will never be surpassed. OTA reveals that without strengthening our research and development efforts, U.S. agriculture will not continue to dominate technology or productivity."

Bulk commodities like wheat and corn, of which the United States still is the dominant supplier, used to be the top generators of agricultural trade income. But in recent years, value-added products — foods that are processed to some degree before export — have overtaken the world trade value of bulk commodities.

Such products allow an extra step of economic gain for the producing country, in effect selling both a raw material and a service at the same time. The leading U.S. high-value products are soybean meal, tobacco, cigarettes, cattle hides and corn gluten feed, the report said.

The Agriculture Department estimates that trade in high-value products is likely to rise by an astounding 9 percent to 12 percent annually until 1990, and that the United States has not performed well in these markets," the study said.

Reflecting continued U.S. reliance on bulk commodities, the American share of all world agricultural trade stood at 39 percent of volume in the period 1979-81, while its share in terms of value was just 18 percent. Since 1983, the United States has had a negative trade balance in processed foods.

The outlook for sales of cereal grains remains bleak, the report said. One projection puts export growth in those commodities at a weak 2 percent annually through the rest of the century, and even the U.S. share of that low figure is likely to drop because of increased competition, it said.

Competing nations have taken advantage of technological advances and some threaten to leapfrog the United States in that area, the report suggested. U.S. companies, because of regulatory constraints, often develop and test their advances overseas before putting the technology to work in this country.

U.S. comparative advantage has shrunk, and some American producing areas now are not economically competitive in the global market, the report said.

Analysts call decision a blow to utility

Idaho Power stock losing allure in wake of PUC ruling on rates

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Power Co. stock will be less attractive to investors until the Idaho Public Utilities Commission significantly alters its ruling that denied the utility most of its rate increase request, a stock analyst said.

The PUC ruling is seen by analysts as a blow for Boise-based Idaho Power, which, like other electric utilities, attracts investors' dollars through the promise of high dividends.

"The commission certainly is not empathizing with the company at all," Philip S. Dow, retail equities marketing manager for Piper, Jaffray & Hopwood Inc. said Tuesday.

He called the ruling "a stingy rate" which fell "far short" of what the Boise-based company needs.

The PUC granted only $90.000 of the $66.2 million sought by Idaho Power and lowered Idaho Power's allowable rate of return on common equity from 15 percent to 12.75 percent.

The commission said the company could not earn a profit for shareholders from its investment in the second unit of the Valley II coal-fired generating plant in northern Nevada until it proves the plant is needed.

Idaho Power has asked the PUC to reconsider the rulings. Hearings have been set for Oct. 28 and 29 in Twin Falls.

Dow said the PUC's actions will make it hard for Idaho Power to achieve even the lower rate of return on equity and means that lower after-tax dollars will be available to boost dividends.

Dow said Piper Jaffray is predicting Idaho Power will see its dividends for every year but one since 1971 — will be hard pressed to increase its dividend next year unless the rate order is modified.

"We don't see it being cut. But if things don't change on a regulatory basis, a very long record of annual dividend increases will be broken," he said.

Electric utilities are attractive investments because many companies are able to generate large amounts of cash which can be returned to shareholders through dividends.

Dow said no other stock group has had a higher rate of growth in dividends.

White utilities in general are expected to increase their dividends by an average of 4 percent each year through 1990, Idaho Power dividend growth will not keep pace, he said.

Idaho Power Vice President and Controller Dewey Hammond said Dow's prediction is probably accurate. Unless rates are increased or until the economy improves significantly, dividend growth will be slower than in the past, he said.

Dow also said a decision last month by Moody's Investors Service to lower Idaho Power's senior debt credit rating one notch was a blow for the company.

"The worst thing that could happen happened," he said.

He said the downgrading means Idaho Power will have to borrow money at higher rates of interest, which leads to lower rates of return on stockholders' investments.

Stocks end day mixed

Interest worries about big names drag Dow down

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed Thursday, unable to make much headway in the face of concern over interest rates involving some big-name blue chips.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, up more than 10 points at midday, closed with a 7.03 loss at 1,796.82.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange reached 153.39 million shares, up from 141.70 million Wednesday and the heaviest total since a 153.36 million share day on Sept. 19.

Analysts said the market has been helped in recent sessions by talk that the long decline of interest rates has further to go.

They also noted that traders have been encouraged by strength in the transportation stocks, which serve as a traditional barometer of the pace of economic activity.

However, brokers also noted a good deal of concern over prospects for third-quarter earnings reports to be issued by many companies in the next couple of weeks.

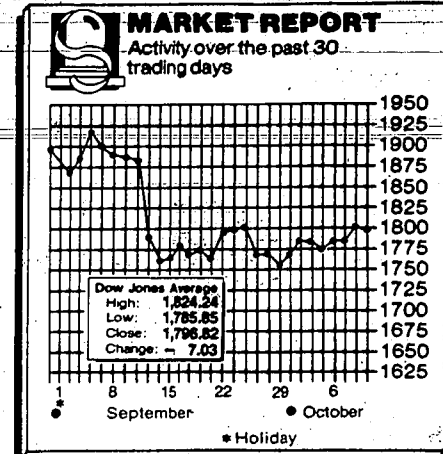

Shares of both International Business Machines and General Motors slumped amid worries about their prospective, quarterly results.

In fact, the Dow Jones industrial average would have finished about unchanged had it not been for the losses recorded by these two stocks.

International Business Machines, which dropped 6 points Tuesday and Wednesday, lost another 5 1/2 to 122 1/2.

Other auto issues weakened along with GM. Chrysler dropped 3 1/2 to 37 1/2 and Ford-Motor was down 1 1/2 to 51 1/2, even though Ford raised its quarterly dividend from 55 cents to 65 cents a share.

The airline group ran into profit-taking after its recent advance.

UAT fell 1 1/2 to 57 1/2 and ranked as the day's most active issue on the board, advancing issues held a narrow edge on declines. The exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped 39.10 to 135.90.

An exception was Delta Air Lines, which managed a 1/2 gain to 47 1/2.

Among the day's prominent gainers was E.F. Hutton Group, up 2 1/2 to 45 1/2. The company has been the subject of recurring takeover speculation. Elsewhere among securities-industry issues, Bear Stearns added 1/2 to 17 1/2, and Merrill Lynch was up 3/4 to 37 1/2.

"Japanese stocks also turned in a strong showing. Hitachi rose 2 1/2 to 73 1/2; Kyocera 2 1/2 to 50 1/2, and Honda 2 1/2 to 65 1/2.

In the overall tally on the Big Board, advancing issues held a narrow edge on declines. The exchange's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped 39.10 to 135.90.

Nationwide—turnover—in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 181.52 million shares.

Standard & Poor's index of 400 industrial stocks lost 1.06 to 261.00, and S&P's 500-stock composite index was down 88 to 355.85.

The NASDAQ composite index for the over-the-counter market rose 18 to 353.06. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index closed at 244.04, up .04.

Northern Utah, Nevada residents question waste burning plant plan

GROUSE CREEK, Utah (AP) — A newly formed development company has proposed building a hazardous waste burn plant and landfill in Box Elder County in the northwest corner of Utah.

On Monday, nearly 100 residents of Grouse Creek, Lucin and nearby Montello, Nev., met with Box Elder County commissioners—officials of the Utah Solid and Hazardous Waste Bureau and representatives of JTE&G Co.

JTE&G wants to build the hazardous waste management burn plant and landfill about a half mile west of the junction of Utah Highway 30 and the turnoff to Grouse Creek, about 20 miles northeast of the proposed site.

The facility is proposed for a 4,600-acre parcel owned by Tom and Jack Taylor of Burley, Idaho, brothers and former residents of Grouse Creek.

The Taylors also are principals in JTE&G Co., which was formed about six months ago specifically to develop the project.

The plant would destroy and detoxify chemical solvents trucked in from Utah and Idaho, said Leroy W. Wirtz, of Bakersfield, Calif., an officer in the company.

Commission Chairman Jim White said the developers told the commission last month the project would cost between $4 million to $6 million and would employ 80 to 100 people.

Bill Sinclair of the Utah Bureau of Soil and Hazardous Waste said JTE&G would have to prepare an environmental impact assessment and an emergency-response plan, which could take years.

Regionalism taking root in art world

Smithsonian assistant director says economics forcing move

By JIM McPHERSON
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — The local artist who wants to make it big, without living in New York City, may have a better chance now than ever before in history. Barbara Shisler Nosanow said last weekend at the Idaho Art Association's annual fall conference in Sun Valley.

Nosanow, the assistant director of museum programs for the Smithsonian Institution's National Museum of American Art, said a new regionalism movement is under way, with artists moving away from metropolitan areas in general, and New York in particular.

She said the new movement is different from that of the 1930s, when artists moved to rural areas in an effort to "abandon the abstract" and portray the realistic aspects of those areas. Today's regionalism, while still frequently more realistic than the work of mainstream New York artists, is based more on practicality, she said.

"Artists tend to live marginal lives financially," said Nosanow. They tend to bring in only enough money to support their own sometimes-sparse lifestyles. But a lot in New York's Soho, once a popular district for artists, now rents for $3,000 per month, she said, adding that crime and "ugliness" have also played a part in reducing the city's appeal.

At the same time that New York's costs have become prohibitive, other factors have made it easier for artists in other parts of the country to work, said Nosanow. She said there has been "a proliferation" of good art schools in state universities, and that art in general has been receiving more corporate support.

It is also easier for the rural artist to stay in touch with the urban art world because of relatively new art magazines and the ease of modern travel. And staying in touch is still a necessity, she said.

"New York is still the city where your work is validated," said Nosanow. The city may no longer be the center for producers of art, she said, but it remains the center for consumers of art — where the critics and the buyers are to be found.

Regional artists come in two varieties, she said. Some are primitives, whose work represents what has surrounded them all their lives. Others have been trained, perhaps in New York or Europe, and then gone to rural areas to work. The primitive generally has much less of a chance of achieving fame through his work, but if he does reach acceptance, he frequently "really makes it big," said Nosanow.

Museums are beginning to do more regional shows, said Nosanow, and galleries and museums in general seem to be "on a roll," their popularity higher than it has been for some time. And regionalism may help keep that trend going, she said, by providing more variety.

"The level of experimentation is higher when spread over a wider area," she said. "Fragmentation is a virtue."

— MASK ART —

A mask of shells, 'Tethys, Mother of Poseidon,' by Nancy McCain of Mackay won the Idaho Art Association competition

Masks face off in annual IAA contest

By JIM McPHERSON
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — More than a dozen masks were constructed for the Idaho Art Association's third annual mask competition, judged at the IAA's annual fall conference in Sun Valley last weekend. Materials used ranged from paper to bark to plaster of Paris, with subject matter limited only by the artists' imaginations.

The eventual winner, 'Tethys, Mother of Poseidon,' was composed entirely of an intricate collection of shells. It and nine others will be featured in a statewide tour, and its creator, Nancy McCain of Mackay, was awarded $500.

The masks of Suzanne Sturn have little in common with the works of art that were displayed during the conference; hers are used to help teach people to act.

An actress with the 21st Street Players of Minneapolis, Minn., Sturn said "many revolutionaries" are returning to the use of masks in theater. And her personal favorites aren't the exaggerated happy and sad faces typically associated with drama, but neutral, expressionless masks which hide all of the emotions portrayed by the actor's face.

"That has silenced the outer personality," she said, adding that the technique makes the actor a symbol, rather than the larger-than-life personality he has become. It also makes him or her work harder.

"The actor is forced to be very precise," said Sturn. "You can't just act with the head; you're forced to use everything." That, she said, can provide a bonus for the audience.

"Hopefully something deeper comes forth," she said. She then supplied masks for the members of her audience and conducted a workshop designed to prove her point.

Those participating in the workshop were put through a number of exercises, some of which seemed to have little to do with acting. The breathing and stretching exercises, which resembled slow-motion aerobics, would help the would-be actors "become more aware" of their own bodies, said Sturn.

In the acting sessions, students were given a variety of activities, including saying "no" five times, in five different ways, without speaking. They were then asked to say the same thing, again in five different ways, without moving.

"It wasn't long before personalities," and even genders, of the actors faded away — though one participant said that wearing the mask made her feel like she should be walking like Charlie Chaplin's "Little Tramp." Body movements did become more exaggerated than they had been before the masks were in place, but those participating were generally able to portray what they wanted even without facial expression or, in some cases, without speech. That is what gives Sturn her appreciation for the expressionless face, she said.

"I am much more interested in this neutral mask and what it demands," she said, in explaining her work.

Schaffer one-acts on boards at CSI

TWIN FALLS — The College of Southern Idaho Drama Department will present two one-act plays by Peter Schaffer, "The Private Ear" and "The Public Eye," on Oct. 16, 17 and 18 at 8:15 p.m. in Theater 119 at the Fine Arts Center.

Both casts are made up of CSI students and directed by Tony Mannen, assistant professor of speech and drama.

In "The Private Ear," Mike Corbett of Twin Falls plays a character known as Tschakovsky, a 30-year-old opera lover who has never had a date. He finally summons the courage to invite a lady to dinner. Doreen is played by Sylvia Dean of Twin Falls. Since he met her at the opera he assumes she has class and in order to impress her he enlists the aid of his friend Ted, played by Jerry Crozier of Jerome.

The plot of "The Public Eye" involves suspicion and jealousy. Charles "Sidley," a middle-aged British accountant played by Gary Winterholler of Twin Falls, suspects his 18-year-old wife Belinda (Kellgy Karel of Walsley) of infidelity. Charles hires detective Julian Christoforou (Cliff Hall of Twin Falls) to find out what Belinda does with her time. Belinda and Christoforou discover a mutual attraction, and their relationship develops until she discovers his real reason for following her around London.

Both plays are typical of Schaffer's work in that they don't fall into a predictable pattern. Director Tony Mannen said, "Some people will walk away thinking they've seen a comedy and some will consider it a tragedy. They affect people differently."

College of Kimberly are production assistants in the director.

Tickets are $3 for adults, $2 for senior citizens and children. Children under six will not be admitted. For reservations call 733-5554 ext. 231.

The pops concert will include some of Vizzutti's own compositions and

An added feature that evening will be the appearance of Suzuki violin students who will perform between the first and second halves of the program.

Course explores castles, cathedrals

By ANDY DURHAM
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — Medieval England and France will come alive through Cathedrals, Castles and Collections in the Middle Ages, a new course to be taught by Alice Elwood at the College of Southern Idaho Oct. 21 through Dec. 16.

The eight-week course will be held Tuesdays from 7-10 p.m. in the Shields Building, room 111. Cost is $20.

The course will introduce the people and events of the period, focusing mainly on the buildings and monuments that tower over the major cities of England and Northern France, said Ruby Peterson, Continuing Education secretary. Elwood will present the class with lectures and accompanying color slides, which she took while on a three-month tour of England and France in 1976.

The objective of the course is to gain an appreciation of the skill with which an illiterate people built the architecture of the 11th through 14th centuries. The class will be especially useful to those who will be traveling to Europe, said Peterson.

Elwood received her bachelor of art's degree in art history and earned additional credits in student teaching from Wichita State University in Kansas. She has previously taught at the college level.

For more information, call Continuing Education at 733-9554, ext. 363.

Dreyfuss signs

The Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK — The ink is dry: Richard Dreyfuss will play a "trigamist" when cameras roll here, maybe in March, on director Paul Mazursky's "Enemies — A Love Story," adapted from the Isaac Bashevis Singer novel.

Dreyfuss agent Peter Rawley said that his star will play a Holocaust survivor living in Brooklyn with his Polish peasant wife, whom he married in gratitude for hiding him after the Nazis murdered his wife and children. When the wife he thought was dead appears, very much alive, a dark comedy of errors ensues.

Dreyfuss just wrapped "Tin Man" at Disney and starts "Nuts" with Barbara Streisand later this month.

An' uh one ...

Anthem profits go to the poor

WEST HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The hunger anthem "We Are the World" surpassed its $20 million goal, and another $12 million from Hands Across America is on its way to feed America's down-trodden, organizers said Wednesday.

Four months after 6 million people joined hands in what had been planned as a coast-to-coast link, USA for Africa President Ken Kragen announced that the "We Are the World" money raised by the May 25 event.

California will receive the largest amount, $12 million, followed by Texas with $11 million and New York with $8.9 million. At the bottom of the list were Vermont with $19,314 and Alaska with $20,245.

The amount distributed to each state was based on a formula evaluating the location of greatest need and the amount of money raised in the specific state. Kragen said states will begin getting funds around Thanksgiving.

The disbursements are the first worked out by a 37-member committee overseeing the Hands Across America allocations.

To date, Hands Across America has raised about $24.5 million, with $7 million in pledges still uncollected, Kragen said. He estimated that as much as $20 million may ultimately be funneled into hunger programs nationwide.

The event's effect on the spirit of giving in America far outstrips any monetary success, Kragen said. Organizers counting on the generosity of Americans originally set a goal of $50 million.

"Dollars are not the issue here," Kragen said, stressing the two USA for Africa projects accomplished their primary goal of drawing attention to the worldwide plight of those without food. "I would like to have raised more. Far more important is whether we're making a difference in the long run."

Mary Rogol, executive director of USA for Africa, appeared at the news conference with Kragen and detailed the latest series of "We Are the World" grants in Africa and the United States.

The "We Are the World" single, album, video and merchandise have raised $51.2 million, Kragen said.

'Peggy Sue' has pleasure with '60s

By SHEILA BENSON
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — One goes to "Peggy Sue Got Married" expecting '60s nostalgia, "a blast from the past." Buddy Holly and lime-green leisure suits. One gets all that, but nothing prepares one for the rush of real emotion the film generates, for its poignance, its reassurance or its high of pure pleasure.

"If you could go back, knowing what you know now," is as reliable a premise as it is intriguing. What would you change? Would you marry him again? Have that sexual fling? Set your feet in the same rut? Or hold back, with the knowledge of the social revolution to come?

Frances Coppola takes that premise, dusts it off, looks at it both seriously and unseriously, and gives it back to us as a rapt love story and a deeply stirring appreciation of the past.

Peggy Sue Bodell (Kathleen Turner) is not even sure she wants to go to her 25th high school reunion. Recently separated from Charlie (Nicolas Cage), the husband she had to marry at 18, even the idea of turning up where everyone will ask, "Where's Crazy Charlie?" the wackiest businessman in TV ads, makes her cringe.

She goes, of course, with her older daughter as moral support. Can't let that 1960s silver version of her prom dress show has had time to waste. Within minutes, Coppola unfolds us in an opening party sequence that is (almost) as rich as "The Godfather's."

Her classmates from this classic small town are predictable yet eerie extensions of themselves at 18. Peggy Sue's two best friends are still that: Carol (Christine Hicks), now divorced and moved away, was beautiful and headstrong then, and nothing has changed. Loyal Maddy (Joan Allen), quiet and unremarkable-looking, married her high school sweetheart — thus "missing the sexual revolution entirely," according to their interviewer-classmate Dolores (Lisa Jane Persky), who was a pushy pain even at 18.

Richard Norvik (Barry Miller), the school's "four-eyed worm" before a microphone made him the town's biggest success story, has even come back with his handsome, pregnant wife. Too classy to gloat, he has not forgotten a single slight; it makes him quietly sardonic. Of the entire class, only Peggy Sue was ever decent to him.

As they are crowning the Reunion King and Queen, Peggy Sue faints, coming to in 1969, a 17-year-old in an 18-year-old's body. She knows the future all too well, from panty hose to the Pill. She has seen Charlie give up his dreams of being a singer and slip into the family business, with a bit of pilfering on the side. Apparently stuck reliving her last weeks of high school, she should muck with her destiny or not?

The script, by newcomers Jerry Leitch and Arlene Sarner, crosses "Our Town's" presence and emotion with "Back to the Future's" cross-generational gags and adds a great ear for the slang of the day.

It is in that real sentiment and the film's poignant questioning-of-love and loyalties that "Peggy Sue" leaves "Back to the Future" in the starting blocks. How does it feel to be able to see your grandmother again; to notice how young your mother was? And in case we have let the attitudes of the '60s slip into a pleasant mush of memory, Coppola reminds us: good girls-bad girls; the sacrosanct Saturday night date; Dad as the unquestioned head of the family and Mom at home in the kitchen; and "I'll respect you for all eternity."

'Crocodile Dundee' leaves a toothy grin impression

TWIN FALLS — Following are capsule reviews of movies currently playing in the Magic Valley. Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and the Los Angeles Times. Opinions are by Los Angeles Times reviewers.

CROCODILE DUNDEE (PG-13). The sunny, reassuring personality of Paul Hogan (the fellow who says "G'day" in the Australian tourism ads) is at the heart of this movie — which he designed and co-wrote for himself. It is more than enough to carry it: a "fish out of water" story, with Hogan as adventurer-hunter Dundee, wooing Linda Kozlowski's inquisitive Newsworld reporter in the Aussie outback, and then in the wilds of Manhattan itself. "Dundee" is really nothing more than a pleasant, amiable, good-natured crowd-pleaser, but it is hard to think of many crowds it could not somehow please.

THE BOY WHO COULD FLY (PG). Sentimental family film centering on a 14-year-old girl (Lucy Deakins) who befriends a possibly near-silent youth (Jay Underwood) her own age who may actually be able to fly. Despite flaws, this kite-fragile film stays aloft, sustained by the radiant Deakins, who is able to take us into her imagination, and by the fervent commitment of writer-director Nick Castle. With Bonnie Geddes, Colleen Dewhurst, Fred Gwynne, Louise Fletcher.

EXTREMITIES (R). Somehow, on the stage it was easier to overlook the fact that this film's characters are painfully underdeveloped. Frankly, we need more from the filmed version, though director

Movie reviews

Robert M. Young is absolutely successful at making us share the feelings of brutalization and humiliation of Marjorie, as played by Farrah Fawcett. That the woman can act is something we all really knew: She is genuine, pathetic and heroic here by turns. But hers is not a performance that grows from beginning to end: It is on a single sustained note.

THE FLY (R). As much a romantic tragedy as a black-humored horror film, "The Fly" unfolds with such eerie grandeur that it will leave you stoked with a creepy high hours after you have left the theater. As scientist Seth Brundle, Jeff Goldblum never loses touch with the dark, comic side of this adventure, offering some delightfully droll, comic touches as a character who's not so much a monster as Groucho Marx with amnesia instead of a cigar. STAND BY ME (R). "Stand By Me" is the summer's great gift, a compassionate perfectly performed look at the real heart of youth. Its atmosphere is full of the great, crude, cruddy, rite-of-passage of four 12-year-old boys, and these four young actors (River Phoenix, Wil Wheaton, Corey Feldman and Jerry O'Connell) have a depth and understanding that makes each character soar and live for days after the film. And what a director Rob Reiner has become: He has seen that this cast stays honest and his movie marvelously restrained.

First Hopi dictionary may spur language rebirth — researchers

TUCSON, ARIZ. (AP) — The Hopi Indian language, spoken by about 10,000 people yet falling into decline as the tribe picks up more and more English, will be preserved in a dictionary, researchers said Wednesday.

The dictionary might even spur a resurrection of the Hopi language, the researchers from the University of Arizona and Northern Arizona said as they announced in a news conference they were getting $441,000 to aid the $1 million project.

Several scholars have been separately compiling lists of Hopi words, and they plan to pool the efforts into a single master list of 25,000 to 30,000 words, which could be ready for publication as soon as 1989.

That many words would not be a complete list of Hopi, the researchers said, noting that so-called primitive languages such as those spoken by Native Americans often are more complex and sophisticated than European tongues.

"We never will get all the words in Hopi — the idea that a dictionary will ever be complete is nonsense," said Kenneth Hill of the University of Arizona.

But despite the limitations, the dictionary should provide a scholarly perspective on how Hopi, traditionally viewed as a dead language, is still being used.

"The premise for this work is the understanding that language captures the interests and concerns of a people in relation to their environment," Northern Arizona University researcher Ekkar Malotki said.

Hopi, for example, have no obscenities in their traditional language.

"There's a total absence of abuse terms or four-letter words, there's a total absence of this type of vocabulary," Malotki said. "So they had to borrow heavily from English."

Malotki said the dictionary would concentrate on a main Hopi dialect, which can be understood all across the Hopi Indian reservation, located among the rocky mesas of northeastern Arizona.

The dictionary also might do away with some misconceptions about the Hopi, Malotki said.

The Hopis are regarded as a peaceful people, for example; but the scholars have not found any Hopi words meaning "peace." A word for warfare will be in the dictionary, however.

The researchers hope their work will lead to other efforts that will halt or reverse the decline of Hopi, which appears to be fading under the pressure of the English spoken by some 200 million people surrounding the Hopis.

"The Indian language will live only if it continues to be learned and spoken by new generations, and many young Hopis have been using English as their main tongue, the researchers said.

But the scholars don't know if there will ever be any motivation for Hopi to continue using their traditional tongue in a modern world.

If they don't, the dictionary might be all that's left of Hopi after a number of years, but that would be better than the fate of some languages, the researchers said.

"Many languages died before the last speaker could be recorded," said University of Arizona anthropologist Carlos Velez-Ibanez.

Shakespearean Festival Council approves budget

CEDAR CITY, Utah — The Utah Shakespearean Festival Council, created in an administrative reorganization in June, has approved a $750,000 budget for 1987.

The budget approved Tuesday is $83,000 more than the 1986 budget, but council chairman Rodney Decker said the increase is in line with projected growth.

Decker said the budget will be presented to Southern Utah State College President Gerald Sherratt and the college's Institutional Council.

The festival is held each summer at a replica of Shakespeare's original Globe Theater on the SUSC campus.

The council was formed after the festival's board of directors was dissolved and three new governing bodies, including a new board of directors and the festival guild, were created.

Council officials said attendance at the festival, which celebrated its 25th anniversary this year, had increased by 6 percent over last year's total.

Patrons already have spent $110,000 for tickets for next year's performances, up $7,000 from ticket sales a year ago, officials said.

'Crocodile Dundee' firmly on top for second weekend

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Crocodile Dundee" defeated its box-office competitors for the second weekend in a row, easily chasing off "Tough Guys," a new comedy starring Burt Lancaster and Kirk Douglas.

Featuring Australian television personality Paul Hogan, "Crocodile Dundee" grossed $8.2 million to boost its two-week U.S. total to $19.5 million. The film already is the all-time top grosser in Australia.

Its U.S. success is apparently due to Hogan's appeal to an audience of older American men who usually don't go to the movies, according to Sidney Ganis, a vice president for Paramount.

"Tough Guys," from Touchstone, opened firmly in second place. The action comedy about two aging train robbers grossed $4.6 million.

Paramount's "Top Gun" continued to streak toward blockbuster status, earning $2.4 million and placing third in the weekend ratings. Its 21-week total is $150.7 million.

Fourth was Columbia's "Stand by Me," with $2.4 million.

A new offering, "Children of a Lesser God," was fifth, earning $1.9 million.

William Hurt and Marlee Matlin star in the Paramount film, based on the Mark Medoff play about a teacher for the deaf who falls in love with one of his students.

Placing sixth in its first weekend in release, with $1.4 million, was "Playing for Keeps," a Universal picture about three teen-agers who transform a rundown hotel into a teen resort. Another new film, "The Boy Who Could Fly," from 20th Century Fox, grossed $1.1 million to finish eighth.

Kris Kristofferson, Willie Nelson to co-host country music awards

By ANDY NOBLE

Will Dolly Parton split her dress on stage or will Roy Acuff nominate "Oliver Newton-John" as female vocalist of the year? No one knows if gaffes like these will occur again, but certainly there may be some surprises at this year's Country Music Association Awards. Willie Nelson and Kris Kristofferson will co-host the 20th anniversary ceremonies, which CBS airs on Monday from the Grand Ole Opry House in Nashville.

This is the first time Nelson and Kristofferson have hosted the ceremonies together, although they've hosted individually in the past. But the duo has been doing a lot of work together recently, including film ("Songwriter"), TV movies (this year's "Stagecoach" remake), as well as on record.

Among the artists scheduled to perform are Emmylou Harris, Dolly Parton and Linda Ronstadt.

Awards are given out in 12 categories. Here are the nominations in the leading categories:

Entertainer of the Year: Reba McEntire, Willie Nelson, the Judds, Ricky Scaggs, George Strait.

Single of the Year: "Bop" (Dan Seals), "Grandpa" (The Judds), "Nobody in His Right Mind Would've Left Her" (George Strait), "Whoever's in New England" (Reba McEntire).

Female Vocalist of the Year: Rosanne Cash, Janie Fricke, Emmylou Harris, Reba McEntire, Anne Murray.

Vocal Duo of the Year: Crystal Gayle and Gary Morris; Dolly Parton and Kenny Rogers; Marie Osmond and Dan Seals; Nicolette Larson and Steve Wariner; Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson.

Horizon Award (Best Newcomer): The Forester Sisters, Kathy Mattea.

Mel Brooks returns to comedies

BY ROBIN ADAMS SLOAN

Q. I see Mel Brooks has been producing a few rather more serious films lately, such as "The Fly." Does he ever plan to go back to his off-the-wall type movies — I hope? — K.B.

A. Looks that way. First project to get under way at the "new MGM" is Brooks' highly-sought-after new comedy "Spaceballs." Brooks himself is returning to the big screen after a three-year absence, and word is the movie is a spoof and homage to space epics. For instance, Brooks' characters (he plays two) are those of the evil Pres. Skroob (one for the anagram fans) and a most benign sage, Yogurt (a take-off on Yoda in "The Empire Strikes Back"). Budgeted at $22,000,000, the film begins lensing next month.

Q. We were surprised when President Reagan appointed his daughter Maureen to a top Republican Party post. Aren't the Reagan kids a little off-beat, to put it mildly? — F.T.

A. While it's true that President and Mrs. Reagan never know what Michael, Patti or Ron will do next, you have to remember that 44-year-old Maureen (her mother was actress Jane Wyman) is a highly qualified political activist who has assisted in earlier campaigns. Her new role will be as co-chairman of the Republican National Committee, a largely ceremonial job even though it's the highest post for a woman in the organization. Maureen on her own quietly represents a more liberal side than the president. She believes in pro-choice and rights for women and will speak up in these areas.

Q. What do you think will happen to Teri Shields, Brooke's mother, now that her daughter is older? — S.S.

A. That's hard to say. Teri Shields has been totally managing her daughter's career for almost two decades, starting back when Brooke was an Ivory Soap baby. I definitely think there'll be major changes in the relationship when Brooke graduates from Princeton next June. She's had her own apartment at the university and close friends already see her making an effort to be somewhat more independent. Brooke at 21 is a smart, level-headed young woman. Where that leaves mother Teri remains to be seen.

Q. I have heard that the great boxer Muhammad Ali is desperately ill. Do you know what's wrong with him? — H.M.

A. At 44, the former three-time world heavyweight boxing champion is suffering from Parkinson's Syndrome, a disease which causes severe body tremors in some cases. Close friends say Ali now has a great deal of trouble speaking.

FOUND—MONEY: London's—hit rock musical "Time" will be coming to the U.S. soon. Sir Laurence Olivier isn't in the show, but as long as it runs he collects $5,000 a week. The musical uses a three-dimensional figure, known as a hologram, of the great actor that makes it appear as though he's actually on stage. The life-like figure earns Sir Laurence his money.

Q. Will there really be a big motion picture based on the life of Judy Garland? I hope so—she was one of my all-time favorites. — H.R.

A. That film has been a pet project for a long time of Garland's ex-husband, Sid Luft. He recently went to see singer Julie Sheppard, who does a one-woman Judy Garland show in New York at the Don't Tell Mama Club. Sheppard is said to "inhabit" Garland down to the tiniest mannerism and Luft wanted to check out the uncanny resemblance to see if Julie would be the perfect Judy. We'll keep you posted on his decision.

Q. Whatever happened to the pink 1959 Cadillac that belonged to the late Jayne Mansfield and was restored for the television film on her life? — T.A.

A. Actor Erik Estrada is now driving it around Beverly Hills. His wife Peggy found the Coupe de Ville in a used-car showroom and bought it for Erik as a first anniversary present.

Q. I think David Mamet is one of our most interesting contemporary playwrights. Can you tell me what he's working on now? — H.E.

A. Gladly. Mamet, whose "Glengarry Glen Ross" Pulitzer Prize-winner has been snapped up for films by the enterprising Zupnik Enterprises, is also doing the screenplay and will participate as a consultant during filming. He's also finishing a new play, "L.A." So where will "L.A." premiere? London, of course. It's all about a day in a super-agent's office.

Q. I heard that gorgeous Cheryl Tiegs is dating an Arab billionaire and is going to move to Kuwait. Say it isn't so, please. — G.O.

A. It isn't. Cheryl has been quietly seeing a young actor for some time. He's Tony Peck. Gregory Peck's son just a few years out of Amherst College. He's 30, younger than the 39-year-old Cheryl, but they seem to be an item. He has a part in the new Brooke Shields movie "Brenda Starr," and the beautiful Ms. Tiegs has come down from New York to visit Peck on the Florida set.

Q. What's the story about Barbara Walters' marriage already getting rocky? She hasn't been married that long. — O.P.

A. If a husband throws a huge party to celebrate the first five months of wedded bliss, you can hardly call the marriage rocky. Hubby Merv Adelson did have some business problems recently when he tried to float bonds to buy nine television stations; but it was nothing a millionaire couldn't handle. The only problem Barbara and Merv might have is managing all their personal real estate. At last count they had homes in Malibu, Bel Air, and Aspen, plus two Manhattan apartments.

Q. Is it true that Anthony Quinn is planning to divorce his wife of 25 years because they had a big fight on a nationwide TV show? — G.W.

A. In a recent husband-and-wife TV interview, Quinn was stunned when spouse Yolanda said that their marriage was not easy for her because Quinn had cheated on her so many times. Despite this, the Quinns have no intentions of breaking up, though Mrs. Quinn may not be doing any more interviews in the near future.

Q. I remember there was some talk back this past spring, and summer because Joan Rivers cancelled personal appearances to have surgery. Has she kissed and made up with everyone she disappointed—apart from Johnny Carson, that is? — P.L.

A. Seems like no one can stay mad at our Joan for long. And one spot she's returning to with bells on is the famed Concord Resort Hotel in the Catskills—where she's just been signed as their first big-name headliner of 1987, topping the New Year's weekend. Joan regrettably

Timid Will Jeffries revels in role as 'General Hospital's' meanie

By JOHN N. GOUDAS

"I'm the meanest guy in show business," says Will Jeffries with a grin.

Will is talking about his "General Hospital" character Damon "Gh" Gribble, who targeted an 8-year-old for extinction recently, the lowest of the low. Damon is tied into Mr. Big, the Mafia kingpin, unveiled as the former police chief, Bert Ramsey, and when Damon's thin eyes start to glimmer, watch out.

Gloria Monty only found her Damon a few months ago, and since then she's turned "GH" into a shooting gallery. The soap's new Robert Duval is Will Jeffries, a hardy New Englander from Vermont who became infected by acting, and spent nine years on the New York boards, surviving through commercials before invading Hollywood.

It took six call-backs last spring for Gloria Monty before she signed Jeffries. "Gloria wanted things a certain way. I had lots of opportunities. Never have I seen anyone so in charge of a company," notes Will. Jeffries came through. He works four days a week as the centerpiece of underworld double-dealing, a sinister hood in natty pinstripes. Jeffries likes the feel, knows he's playing make-believe because he sees himself as a plodding lumberjack.

That's natural. If you're raised off the shores of Lake Champlain it never rubs off. Living close to the town's public ice rink, Will used to put his ice skates on in the house, ankle downstair, run two blocks on asphalt, and enter heaven's rink where he played hockey until late at night. From the age of 14 on through college at the University of Vermont, Will dabbled in radio and ran a rock 'n' roll band.

"I was too scared to move to New York City," says Jeffries. "So I moved to Poughkeepsie. I had that radio sense of inferiority. You hide behind the mike and never believe you have talent to perform in front of everybody."

That's a nice touch for Gloria. She hires a guy who thought Manhattan was too rough to become the raunchiest hood in her stock company. Maybe Jeffries overcompensates. Something called obstinacy runs in the Vermont blood. Jeffries paid his way with 150 commercials in Manhattan. Now he lives in the Hollywood Hills among the coyotes and raccoons with wife Cheryl, a former gymnast with potential for the '88 Olympics, and their 2-year-old son.

"I have to tell you something else about Gloria Monty," says Jeffries in closing. "She was the only one who asked about my training, and checked on it. It turns out she was a friend of one of my teachers. No one else in Aussie Olivia Newton-John has a shop called "Koala Blue," selling fashions, toys and food from Australia and she and hubby Matt Lattanzi are hoping to franchise the shop around the U.S. Bruce Jenner and Melissa Manchester are two of the partners in an Encino restaurant and Dudley Moore has his own restaurant in Venice, Calif., where he drops in to play the piano fairly often.

Q I hear roller skating is making a big comeback. Do you know why?
J.R. A. Could be because the movies and the theater will be rolling in skates come fall. MGM's "Solar Babies" stars a futuristic 1,000 years from now) teenage survivor gang who get around only on roller skates; Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Starlight Express" will feature the first roller-skating musical cast; and Jerry Tokofsky's "Goin' to the Chapel" film will have four roller-skate sequences.

Q I know there are literally hundreds, perhaps thousands of books on the late Elvis Presley. Which is the biggest seller?
M.R. A. Right now, looks as though Priscilla Beaulieu Presley's "Elvis and Me" holds that position. Word from Berkley Books is that almost 2,000,000 copies went in its first paperback printing in August and ditto the month after.

Kasdorf made the usual rounds as a guest star on prime time shows after leaving "The Guiding Light" before she signed with "Santa Barbara."
 "Another World" is continuing in its aggressive casting by hiring ndway actor James Pickens. He outed last week as crusading lawyer Zack Edwards — an attorney out to represent the underdog.

 A hit and run driver kills Suzi and paralyzes Cagney on "Search for Tomorrow." Wilma searches for David to perform surgery, however, he is in no shape to operate. Jerry hides evidence.

'When the Bough Breaks' marks TV-film actor's producing debut

By JERRY BUCK
 The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Ted Danson seems busy enough, what with "Cheers" and his film career, but he has now taken on the duties of producer.

Danson's first effort is the NBC movie "When the Bough Breaks," a mystery thriller in which he also stars. The movie will be broadcast Sunday at 8 p.m. MDT on KTVB Boise and KUTV Salt Lake City.

He plays a child psychologist who becomes involved in investigating the murders of several wealthy and powerful men. Phil Penningroth wrote the screenplay based on the book by Jonathan Kellerman, winner of the 1986 Edgar Allan Poe Award. Waris Hussein directed.

Danson was executive producer with his partner, Dan Fauci, and is looking for other projects to develop. He hopes to produce a small feature film during his next vacation from NBC's "Cheers."

Danson recently starred in two feature films, "A Fine Mess" and "Just Between Friends," but neither was a box office success.

"Now that I have my own production company I feel much more grounded than waiting for someone to tap me on the shoulder and say you're a movie star," he said. "I can have a hand in doing the things I want to do. I have certain things I want to say. I used to think I had to wait until I was a big star to do that."

He said he sees "When the Bough Breaks" as a murder mystery that has social overtones and is also a character study. "It's a man coming to grips with his humanity," he said. "There are some very evil people here and when he bumps into them, does he combat evil with evil?"

"I play a child psychologist and my best friend is a police detective who happens to be gay. Nothing more is made of it. I think it's great when you can show a relationship between two men, one straight, one gay, and nothing is made of it. This is also a wonderful Los Angeles piece. It's the kind of story you couldn't do anywhere else. It exposes the excesses of the rich. The bad guys are very rich people who are into child abuse. There are a lot of good things about L.A., but there's also a lot of excess."

The movie also stars Richard Masur, Rachel Ticotin, Kim Miyori and James Noble.

Danson was just back from two weeks in Africa, where he had completed his role in an ABC movie tentatively called "We Are the Children." It's about the famine in Ethiopia, although for political reasons it was filmed in Kenya. The movie also stars Ally Sheedy and Judith Ivey. It was produced by Paulist Productions and Father Elwood "Bud" Keiser was executive producer.

"There was a constant 20-mile wind, like being on the ocean. The tents flapped all the time, there were desert storms. You couldn't go anywhere without having 10 kids holding your hands. You'd wake up in the morning and there would be a warrior with a spear. It was such an intense experience I hope I don't lose it."

Characters urge better kids' shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Capt. Kangaroo, Mickey Mouse and Big Bird came to the Capitol on Wednesday to kick off a campaign to make television more relevant to its most loyal fans.

The costumed characters were joined by lawmakers and celebrities in proclaiming next week "National Children's Television Awareness Week."

"TV can shape our children's values. It can make them grow, or turn them into a crop of couch potatoes," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J.

Lautenberg joined Rep. Tim Wirth, D-Colo., in introducing the Children's Television Education Act, setting national broadcasting standards. The bill would require broadcast and cable stations to carry a minimum of seven hours a week of educational or informative children's programming.

The measure is aimed, in part, at Federal Communications Commission rulings refusing to interfere in the quantity or quality of "Kidvid," as children's video has been called.

While complimentary about some children's shows, speakers at a Capitol Hill news conference complained about television violence and the use of trademarked characters in what Lautenberg called "program-long commercials."

"What's for sale here? My kid's mind, his passions shouldn't be for sale," said actor David Birney of "WonderWorks."

Peggy Charren, president of Action for Children's Television, said the week was designed to help "turn that set from a Pandora's box into an Aladdin's lamp."

On hand to endorse the campaign were broadcasting industry representatives and officials of public interest groups. They were joined by costumed actors playing Sesame Street's Big Bird, Mickey and Minnie Mouse and other cartoon characters.

Plans for the week, beginning Sunday, include public service announcements on television, pamphlets to educate parents and children, and proclamations signed by a dozen governors and Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn.

Sports Highlight

7 p.m. (KIVI) Professional Football The Cincinnati Bengals need another win to affirm their place atop the once-proud AFC Central division. At 3-2, the Bengals were tied for first with Cleveland at presstime. The Bengals' opponents tonight, the Pittsburgh Steelers, are off to one of their worst starts ever, with a 1-4 record and little chance of catching either the Browns or the Bengals. Why? The Steeler offense is ranked dead last in the AFC, having gained an average of only 260 yards per game over the first five weeks. They have scored just 63 points over five games, an average of 12½ per game. Only three teams have scored fewer points so far: Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Green Bay. The brightest spot for the Bengals? Wide receiver Chris Collinsworth, who has caught 22 passes for 378 yards, an average of just over 17 yards per catch. Four of those grabs have been for TDs.

Study: Rock videos less violent than prime-time TV programs

By JANGEHORSAM
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Rock videos, under fire for their blood, gore and slow-motion mayhem, have yet to rival the violence on prime-time television, according to a study published by the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School of Communications.

"Nothing is as violent as prime-time TV," said George Gerbner, dean of the Annenberg school and editor of the Journal of Communications, which published the report.

"I think the concerns about rock videos have been exaggerated. There does not seem to be a specific reason for focusing on music videos per se."

The researchers stopped far short of endorsing music videos, however. They said their analysis of 42 hours of videos led to the conclusion that they are violent, male-oriented and laden with sexual content, criticisms voiced by feminists and the National Coalition on Television Violence.

About 75 percent of all prime-time shows contain violence, compared with 55 percent of all "concept videos," which dramatize the music, according to the study's authors, Barry L. Sherman and Joseph R. Dominick of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at the University of Georgia.

The study covered the 1985-86 prime-time season. Gerbner said this week he wouldn't discuss the new TV season because, he said, impressions usually are misleading.

The study found that music videos don't have as much sex as prime-time television — 1.4 sexual episodes per minute versus 1.8 on prime time — but the sex is more graphic. However, most of the sexual involvement consisted of non-intimate touching, such as handshaking.

"It's well-charged, with a lot of sexual implications," Gerbner said.

Study: Rock videos less violent than prime-time TV programs

By JAN GEHORSAM
The Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Rock videos, under fire for their blood, gore and slow-motion mayhem, have yet to rival the violence on prime-time television, according to a study published by the University of Pennsylvania's Annenberg School of Communications.

"Nothing is as violent as prime-time TV," said George Gerbner, dean of the Annenberg school and editor of the Journal of Communications, which published the report.

"I think the concerns about rock videos have been exaggerated. There does not seem to be a specific reason for focusing on music videos per se."

The researchers stopped far short of endorsing music videos, however. They said their analysis of 42 hours of videos led to the conclusion that they are violent, male-oriented and laden with sexual content, criticism voiced by feminists and the National Coalition on Television Violence.

About 75 percent of all prime-time shows contain violence, compared with 38 percent of all concept videos, which dramatize the music, according to the study's authors, Barry L. Sherman and Joseph R. Dominick of the School of Journalism and Mass Communication at the University of Georgia.

The study covered the 1985-86 prime-time season. Gerbner said this week he wouldn't discuss the new TV season because, he said, impressions usually are misleading.

The study found that music videos don't have as much sex as prime-time television — 1.4 sexual episodes per minute versus 1.8 on prime time — but the sex is more graphic. However, most of the sexual involvement consisted of non-intimate touching, such as handshaking.

"It's well-charged, with a lot of sexual implications," Gerbner said.

Sex in videos has a distinctly adolescent slant that is "long on titillation and physical activity but devoid of emotional involvement," the researchers said.

Women are often depicted as upper-class sex objects who attract lower-class males, as in Billy Joel's "Uptown Girl" video, the study said.

Prime-time shows have more violence because they have extended plots, unlike most three-minute videos, Gerbner said.

"With a plot, you need conflict, suspense, something active," he said. "Violence is the cheapest, most active thing going. Not that it's popular — it's cheap to produce."

Videos on the MTV network and on such shows as "Friday Night Videos" and "Night Tracks" rely less on action and more on the performers and their music, he said.

The researchers found several key differences between videos, which are directed at teen-agers and young adults, and conventional TV, which is aimed at 25- to 49-year-old consumers.

NBC regains top spot in ratings, but is fretting over 'Crime Story'

By ROBERT BARR
The Associated Press

NEW YORK — NBC finished comfortably in first place in the weekly A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings, but the producer of "Crime Story" was called in for questioning Tuesday about the future of the network's weakest new show.

"Crime Story" was NBC's only show in the bottom-10 as its prime-time programs averaged an 18.0 rating last week, compared to CBS' 16.4 and ABC's 14.6.

NBC had four of the top five shows, led by "The Cosby Show" in first place, and 13 of the top 30. CBS placed first among news shows with a 10.9 rating, followed by NBC at 10.8 and ABC at 10.4.

Each rating point represents 874,000 homes with television.

"Crime Story" was buried on Tuesday night by "Moonlighting," ABC's highest-rated show. "Moonlighting" ranked seventh with a rating of 26.8 and a 41 share, while "Crime Story" was 63rd with a rating of 10.6 and a 16 share.

The share is the percentage of television sets turned on during the time period that are tuned to particular show.

Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, called a meeting Tuesday with "Miami Vice" creator Michael Mann, who is executive producer of "Crime Story," to discuss the show's future, including production of nine episodes which were to be shot in Las Vegas.

"We are very satisfied with the production of the series," Tartikoff said from Los Angeles. "If there is a fault, it's in the scheduling."

With the rest of NBC's prime-time shows performing well, Tartikoff said he has nowhere else to put "Crime Story." One possibility, he said, would be to substitute it for one of the network's movie nights.

This week and perhaps next week, "Moonlighting" will be pre-empted by the baseball playoffs, and that will be a test of whether "Crime Story" can develop a larger audience, Tartikoff said.

Set in Chicago in the 1960s, the show stars former Chicago detective Dennis Farina as head of a special crime unit which is battling the mob.

Tartikoff added that he expected "Crime Story" to be part of NBC's

NBC president Brandon Tartikoff says new slot may cure show's poor score schedule next year as well.

"Moonlighting," the sassy romantic comedy starring Cybill Shepherd and Bruce Willis, surged into the top 10 just after it was all but ignored at the Emmy Awards ceremony. The show was nominated in 16 categories but won only one.

Last week's rating of 26.8 was the highest ever for "Moonlighting," said Larry Hyams, associate director of audience analysis at ABC.

"Dallas," a top 10 show two weeks ago with its "dream" sequence, fell to 15th place last week and its rating of 21.6 was down 4.9 points. However, its competition on NBC, "Miami Vice," was in 24th place with a rating of 17.4, exactly the same as a week earlier.

"The 'Dallas'-'Miami Vice' situation is probably surprising people," said Michael Eisenberg, research director for CBS.

Tartikoff said Tuesday that he still expects "Miami Vice" to catch up in a month or so, but Eisenberg said he saw no reason why "Dallas" should not remain on top.

The big drop last week, Eisenberg said, probably reflected a large number of curious people who tuned in for the first episode but who normally do not watch the show.

Sunday night's battle between Elizabeth Taylor and Linda Evans was no contest. The "Dynasty" star commanded 36 percent of the audience for the first part of "The Last Frontier" on CBS while Miss Taylor and Robert Wagner got just 19 percent of the viewers for "There Must Be a Pony" on ABC. NBC's movie, "Trading Places" with Eddie Murphy, was a strong second with a 34 share.

Hyams said that Miss Evans' film was especially popular in the smaller markets. In the 13-city ratings, it managed only a 26 share.

The top five shows last week were: "The Cosby Show," "Family Ties" and "Cheers," all of NBC; "Murder, She Wrote" on CBS; and "Golden Girls" on NBC.

The rest of the top 10 included: "Night Court" on NBC; "Moonlighting" on ABC; "60 Minutes" on CBS; "The Last Frontier, Part I" on CBS and "Growing Pains" on ABC.

Two ABC shows, "Our World" and "Heart of the City," tied for 12th place.

Like '2 friends in the bleachers, Scully, Garagiola cover baseball

By MARTIE ZAD

The Washington Post

Vin Scully is paid millions to talk. When it comes to describing baseball, he is an all-time master at painting word pictures.

And yet, the greatest sportscasting tool of this 58-year-old boy of summer may very well be his silence.

Scully knows when to talk and — a rarity in the business — when to shut up.

His best example: "When Aaron hit his 715th home run, it must have been a record for the longest stretch without words. I took my headset off, walked to the back of the booth, got a drink of water and talked to the engineer for a while.

"It was the longest spontaneous roar I know of. They fired off a bunch of fireworks. It was really maaaarvelous. There 'was not one thing I could have added to that."

Then there are times when the game is dragging. Scully can fill the gaps in his conversational manner with the fans or his cohort, Joe Garagiola.

"The conversational style comes from working alone on radio," said Scully. "I make a statement or ask a question that you might have and then answer the question. I often catch myself talking to the mike the same way I would to a person."

Saturday-NBC will begin its 35th telecast of the World Series. It will mark Scully's 11th World Series assignment and Garagiola's eighth, climaxing their fourth season together.

"Some people thought it would be a short marriage," said Garagiola. "I'm happy to say, I hope we're lifers. I knew we were going to be good together. You can feel it when you're there. There's a chemistry. We're like two friends going to the ballpark to sit in the bleachers on a Saturday afternoon, only we sit in a TV booth and a lot of people are listening."

Executive producer Mike Weisman noted that people are tuned in to watch the game. Vin and Joe let them do that.

Scully has been doing Dodgers games on radio and television, for 37 uninterrupted years and flatly admits he still gets a charge from the noise of the crowd.

"After all these years, when I hear the roar of the crowd, I still get goose bumps. When I was a kid and listened to a football game on radio, I loved to hear the crowd roar. I would lie on the floor with my head on a pillow under a large, four-legged radio and let it wash over me like water from a shower head. I've always said the roar of the crowd is the best thing at a ball game."

Scully also places a high value on the chemistry of the people in the booth. In assessing his NBC work with Garagiola, he said, "The big thing about us is that neither one of us is interested in hearing the word 'I,' and both of us are deeply interested in the pronoun 'we.' I feel strongly that this has been a key for us."
